SPECULATIVE INVESTMENTS.

ARGENTINE HARD DOLLARS.—My latest issued advice for speculative investment was Argentine Hard Dollars. These I recommended when they stood at 63. A purchaser would have since received a quarter's dividend of £9 6s. 3d. on 5,000 dollars, the equivalent of £1,000 stock. They have since been 73½, so that, allowing for the accrued increase in value, a purchaser would have received interest at the rate of over 25 per cent. per annum on the amount invested, and had they been purchased with a cover of 2 per cent., the profit secured would have been at the rate of 842 per cent. on amount invested.

I again repeat I have been invariably right in my speculative investments. I only recommend good dividend paying stocks, and I think this system of making money well worth your attention. See below.

£5 Commands £500 Stock.
£10 " 1,000 "
£20 " 2,000 "
£50 " 5,000 "
No other liability whatever.

THE AMOUNT of STOCK I dealt in this YEAR up to the Account ending Sept. 28 was over SEVENTY-ONE MILLIONS.

£71,000,000.

IMPORTANT TELEGRAPHIC ARRANGEMENTS.

I WISH to call close attention to a new departure in my business, which is of the utmost importance to country dealers. I have made arrangements with the Post Office for a direct wire into my own office, thus saving some 15 to twenty minutes on messages. I need hardly point out the advantages to customers dealing at a distance, who are thus put in actual contact with my offices from every part of the United Kingdom. Thus a message sent from MY CITY OFFICES to MANCHESTER is DELIVERED in FIVE MINUTES.

JOHN SHAW'S SYSTEM of BUSINESS.—He offers more liberal terms for dealing than any dealer in London or elsewhere. Get advice where you choose, but deal where you get the best terms, and possible losses will result in positive profits.

For the use and information of his clients, JOHN SHAW has prepared the following:

Highest and lowest prices for the past five years of all the leading Stocks and Shares, together with the dividends paid during the same period.

Railway weekly Traffic Returns Book for the current half-year, with corresponding figures for 1885 and 1886.

Telegraphic Code for transmission of telegrams by cypher.

The above should be applied for by all speculators and investors, and will be forwarded free of charge.

JOHN SHAW.

De Bear, Chief of the Reporting Department (now appointed for superior reporting ability to also lead the elementary tuition in place of late head master of that section). At present there is not a school of Shorthand in London that has more than one male or one female instructor to teach all its pupils except the Metropolitan, which has 20 instruction rooms and 20 teachers and readers (paid). Beware of new schools where low fees are a confession and an apology for their want of facilities and experience in producing efficient writers. MONEY MARKET.

THURSDAY EVENING.

On balance, £300,000 in gold, chiefly from Holland and Germany, was sent into the Bank, and although this operation was not generally known during business hours, discounts again receded. Three months' bills were negotiated at 3¾, ⅝ per cent., and still lower quotations are anticipated. Under these circumstances the discount houses may soon reduce their terms for deposits, which are now 3½ and 3¾ per cent. Loans for the day were obtainable at 2½, 3 per cent., and money to cover to-morrow's settlement was offered at 3¾, 4. An instalment fell due on the New South Wales loan, and another is payable on the Brazilian issue on Monday. Money will doubtless be a good deal wanted for the liquidation, though no extreme pressure is expected. Telegrams from the Argentine Republic state that the Chambers have already altered the Free Banking Law in the sense indicated this morning, and an important release of gold is therefore probable, with an entire cessation of exports hence. At Buenos Ayres yesterday the premium on this metal was as high as 48¾ per cent., but a decided relapse is now looked for. The easier tendency of the market will doubtless be soon followed by large financial operations, including the introduction of the new Argentine conversion loan. As to the probable course of the bullion movement, the foreign exchanges are now considerably below gold point, through the rapid relapse in the value of money here, and withdrawals of coin for internal purposes are anticipated, including sovereigns for Ireland and Scotland. Of the total on the way from Australia—about £250,000—only about £80,000 is due in a week or two. Under the temptation of high rates, a large amount of "country money" has been offered at the pending liquidation; but the activity of trade, which is daily becoming more pronounced, may soon involve an important reduction in the floating supply of capital. The Bank return is not so favourable as expected, the increase in the gold being only £329,433, against a recorded influx of £764,000, so that £434,567 has been taken for the provinces. But the note circulation has diminished £461,600, and hence the addition to the reserve is £791,033. Nevertheless, the proportion is only ⅛ per cent. higher, at 34⅛ per cent., in consequence of an augmentation of £1,808,455 in the public and private deposits. Government securities are larger by £3,000,000, this representing the amount temporarily borrowed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in connection with the disbursement of the quarterly interest on the Funds. Repayments have caused a decrease of £2,871,906 in the other securities, and the rest is £670,023 less, owing to the distribution of the half-yearly dividend on Bank stock. At Berlin the outside rate of discount has declined to 3 per cent., but the Paris quotation remains at 3¾.

At the Stock Exchange business was again partly confined to the settlement. In anticipation of a large influx of gold, the markets opened firm, and an improvement subsequently took place in some securities. The Bank return, however, caused a partial relapse, the changes, though satisfactory, not being quite equal to recent estimates. Consols were in request, and rose about ⅛ per cent. The inquiry extended to other solid securities that have recently been prejudiced by the rise in the value of money, including Egyptian Guaranteed, Board of Works and Indian Government stocks. With a few exceptions, the variations in foreign bonds were upward. Argentine Dollars and Cedulas were bought on the financial news from Buenos Ayres. Costa Rica, Egyptian, French, Greek, Hungarian, Mexican, Portuguese, Russian, and Turkish were better, but Egyptian Unified and Peruvian gave way. The latter were sold by recent speculative buyers. Generally, the final prices in this department were not the best.

Some of the English railways advanced, especially Taff Vale. Glasgow and South-Western, Caledonian, Brighton "A," Great Northern "A," and Metropolitan rose ½ to 1; but the alterations in other lines amounted to only ⅛ to ¼. North-Eastern and North British showed dulness. American railroads were rather flat at one time, but closed firmer, in sympathy with New York prices. Compared with yesterday the movements were unimportant. Grand Trunks were adversely affected by the issue of a traffic return with a decrease of £7,459, or about £5,000 more than expected. The First and Second Preferences were mostly offered, and relapsed about 1 per cent. each. A fall of 2½ to 3 per cent. occurred in Mexican (Vera Cruz) stocks, partly on a vague rumour that another bridge had collapsed. No official information to this effect was received, and the decline is probably more particularly due to the prospect of a further considerable delay in the repair of the Metlac bridge. On the other hand, an active demand prevailed for Mexican Central Four per Cent. Bonds, and the final quotation (69) was fully 2 per cent. higher. With reference to recent statements, it may be mentioned that the bulk of this company's receipts is derived from local traffic, and that the branch to Tampico will be shortly completed. Brazilian and Argentine railways were likewise in request. Cable and miscellaneous undertakings exhibited firmness, and Produce Clearing rose ½. An advance was observable in copper and diamond mines. Salt Union shares were largely purchased by recent speculative sellers, and touched 8½ prem. The last price was 7½ prem.

About £320,000 in gold from the Continent was received at the Bank, and £20,000 was taken out for South America.

The Lahn, from New York, has brought £55,400 in specie. About £20,000 has been taken for Bombay by the Clyde, and £11,700 for Calcutta by the Mirzapore.

No alteration was apparent in bar silver. Bombay transfers declined 1-32d, to 1s 4 13-32d; but bills in Shanghai improved ⅛d, to 4s 3⅝d. Rupee Paper receded ⅛; the Four and a Half per Cents. closed at 71, ¼, and the Four per Cents. at 67, ¼.

German Bourses were strong, and at Berlin an advance was reported in Egyptian Unified, Russian, Turkish, Italian, Hungarian, Austrian Credit, and Deutsche Bank. The rouble was fully ⅜ higher. In Paris the tendency was undecided. Rio Tinto and Ottoman Bank improved, while Crédit Foncier, Suez Canal, Panama, Greek, and Spanish receded. The Three per Cent. Rentes were unaltered, at 82f 47½c, and the Four and a Half per Cents. 5c lower, at 105f 52½c. Exchange on London (cheques) fell 1c, to 25f 40½c.

According to the Bank of France return money has been in better demand in Paris, and the bills discounted exhibit an increase of £1,940,520.

THE LONDON TRAGEDIES.

MITRE-SQUARE INQUEST.

Yesterday, at the City Coroner's Court, Golden-lane, Mr. S. F. Langham resumed the inquest respecting the death of Catherine Eddowes, who was found murdered and mutilated in Mitre-square, Aldgate, early on the morning of Sunday, Sept. 30.

Mr. Crawford, City Solicitor, again watched the case on behalf of the police.

Dr. G. W. Sequeira, surgeon, of No. 34, Jewry-street, Aldgate, deposed: On the morning of Sept. 30 I was called to Mitre-square, and I arrived at five minutes to two o'clock, being the first medical man on the scene of the murder. I saw the position of the body, and I entirely agree with the evidence of Dr. Gordon Brown in that respect.

By Mr. Crawford: I am well acquainted with the locality and the position of the lamps in the square. Where the murder was committed was probably the darkest part of the square, but there was sufficient light to enable the miscreant to perpetrate the deed. I think that the murderer had no design on any particular organ of the body. He was not possessed of any great anatomical skill.

Can you account for the absence of noise?—The death must have been instantaneous after the severance of the windpipe and the blood-vessels.

Would you have expected the murderer to be bespattered with blood?—Not necessarily.

How long do you believe life had been extinct when you arrived?—Very few minutes—probably not more than a quarter of an hour.

Mr. William Sedgwick Saunders, medical officer of health for the City, said: I received the stomach of the deceased from Dr. Gordon Brown, carefully sealed, and I made an analysis of the contents, which had not been interfered with in any way. I looked more particularly for poisons of the narcotic class, but with negative results, there being not the faintest trace of any of these or any other poisons.

Annie Phillips stated: I reside at No. 12, Dilston-road, Southwark Park-road, and am married, my husband being a lamp-black packer. I am daughter of the deceased, who formerly lived with my father. She always told me that she was married to him, but I have never seen the marriage lines. My father's name was Thomas Conway.

The Coroner: Have you seen him lately?—Not for the last fifteen or eighteen months.

Where was he living then?—He was living with me and my husband, at No. 15, Acre-street, Southwark Park-road.

What calling did he follow?—That of a hawker.

What became of him?—I do not know.

Did he leave on good terms with you?—Not on very good terms.

Did he say that he would never see you again, or anything of that sort?—No.

Was he a sober man?—He was a teetotaller.

Did he live on bad terms with your mother?—Yes, because she used to drink.

Have you any idea where Conway is now?—Not the least. He ceased to live with Eddowes entirely on account of her drinking habits.

Your father was in the 18th Royal Irish Regiment?—So I have been told. He had been a pensioner ever since I was eight years old. I am twenty-three now. They parted about seven or eight years ago.

Did your mother ever apply to you for money?—Yes.

When did you last see her?—Two years and one month ago.

Where did you live when you last saw her?—In King-street, Bermondsey.

Have you any brothers or sisters by Conway?—Two brothers.

Where are they living?—In London.

Did your mother know where to find either of you?—No.

Were your addresses purposely kept from her?—Yes. To prevent [illegible] applying for money.

The Fore[illegible] Was your father aware when he left you that you[illegible]her was living with Kelly?—Yes.

Mr. Craw[illegible] Are you quite certain that your father was a pensioner of the 18th Royal Irish?—I was told so, but I am not sure whether it was the 18th or the Connaught Rangers. It may have been the latter.

The Coroner: That is the 88th?—I do not know.

Mr. Crawford: That is so. It so happens that there is a pensioner of the name of Conway belonging to the Royal Irish, but that is not the man. To witness: When did your mother last receive money from you?

Witness: Just over two years ago. She waited upon me in my confinement, and I paid her for it.

Did you ever get a letter from her?—No.

Do you know anything about Kelly?—I have seen him two or three times at the lodging-house in Flower and Dean-street, with my mother.

When did you last see them together?—About three years and a half ago.

You knew they were living together as man and wife?—Yes.

Is it the fact that your father is living with your two brothers?—He was.

Where are your brothers residing now?—I do not know. He was always with them. One was fifteen and the other eighteen years of age.

When did you last see them?—About eighteen months ago. I have not seen them since.

Are we to understand that you had lost all trace of your mother, father, and two brothers for at least eighteen months?—That is so.

Detective-Sergeant John Mitchell, of the City police, said: I have, under instructions, and with other officers, made every endeavour to find the father and brothers of the last witness, but without success up to the present.

The Coroner: Have you found a pensioner named Conway belonging to the 18th Royal Irish?—I have. He has not been identified as the husband of the deceased.

Detective Baxter Hunt: Acting under instructions, I discovered the pensioner, Conway, of the Royal Irish, and have confronted him with two sisters of the deceased, who, however, failed to recognise him as the man who used to live with the deceased. I have made every endeavour to trace the Thomas Conway in question and the brothers of Annie Phillips, but without success.

A Juror: Why did you not confront this Conway with the daughter of the deceased, Annie Phillips?—That witness had not been found then.

Mr. Crawford: The theory has been put forward that it was possible for the deceased to have been murdered elsewhere, and her body brought to where it was found. I should like to ask Dr. Gordon Brown, who is present, what his opinion is about that.

Dr. Gordon Brown: I do not think there is any foundation for such a theory. The blood on the left side was clotted, and must have fallen at the time the throat was cut. I do not think that the deceased moved the least bit after that.

The Coroner: The body could not have been carried to where it was found?—Witness: Oh, no.

City-constable Lewis Robinson, 931, deposed: At half-past eight, on the night of Saturday, Sept. 29, while on duty in High-street, Aldgate, I saw a crowd of persons outside No. 29, surrounding a woman whom I have since recognised as the deceased.

The Coroner: What state was she in?—Drunk.

Lying on the footway?—Yes. I asked the crowd if any of them knew her or where she lived, but got no answer. I then picked her up and sat her against the shutters, but she fell down sideways. With the aid of a fellow-constable I took her to Bishopsgate Police-station. There she was asked her name, and she replied "Nothing." She was then put into a cell.

Did any one appear to be in her company when you found her?—No one in particular.

Mr. Crawford: Did any one appear to know her?—No.

The apron being produced, torn and discoloured with blood, the witness said that to the best of his knowledge it was the apron the deceased was wearing.

The Foreman: What guided you in determining whether the woman was drunk or not?

Witness: Her appearance.

The Foreman: I ask you because I know of a case in which a person was arrested for being drunk who had not tasted anything intoxicating for eight or nine hours. You are quite sure this woman was drunk?—She smelt very strongly of drink.

Sergeant James Byfield, of the City Police: I remember the deceased being brought to the Bishopsgate Station at a quarter to nine o'clock on the night of Saturday, Sept. 29.

In what condition was she?—Very drunk. She was brought in supported by two constables and placed in a cell, where she remained until one o'clock the next morning, when she had got sober. I then discharged her, after she had given her name and address.

What name and address did she give?—Mary Ann Kelly, No. 6, Fashion-street, Spitalfields.

Did she say where she had been, or what she had been doing?—She stated that she had been hopping.

Constable George Henry Hutt, 968, City Police: I am gaoler at Bishopsgate station. On the night of Saturday, Sept. 29, at a quarter to ten o'clock, I took over our prisoners, among them the deceased. I visited her several times until five minutes to one on Sunday morning. The inspector, being out visiting, I was directed by Sergeant Byfield to see if any of the prisoners were fit to be discharged. I found the deceased sober, and after she had given her name and address, she was allowed to leave. I pushed open the swing-door leading to the passage, and said, "This way, missus." She passed along the passage to the outer door. I said to her, "Please, pull it to." She replied, "All right. Good night, old cock." (Laughter.) She pulled the door to within half a foot of being close, and I saw her turn to the left.

The Coroner: That was leading towards Houndsditch?—Yes.

The Foreman: Is it left to you to decide when a prisoner is sober enough to be released or not?—Not to me, but to the inspector or acting inspector on duty.

Is it usual to discharge prisoners who have been locked up for being drunk at all hours of the night?—Certainly.

How often did you visit the prisoners?—About every half-hour. At first the deceased remained asleep; but at a quarter to twelve she was awake, and singing a song to herself, as it were. I went to her again at half-past twelve, and she then asked when she would be able to get out. I replied: "Shortly." She said, "I am capable of taking care of myself now."

Mr. Crawford: Did she tell you where she was going?—No. About two minutes to one o'clock, when I was taking her out of the cell, she asked me what time it was. I answered, "Too late for you to get any more drink." She said, "Well, what time is it?" I replied, "Just on one." Thereupon she said, "I shall get a ——— fine hiding when I get home, then."

Was that her parting remark?—That was in the station yard. I said, "Serve you right; you have no right to get drunk."

You supposed she was going home?—I did.

In your opinion is that the apron the deceased was wearing?—To the best of my belief it is.

What is the distance from Mitre-square to your station?—About 400 yards.

Do you know the direct route to Flower and Dean-street?—No.

A Juror: Do you search persons who are brought in for drunkenness?—No, but we take from them anything that might be dangerous. I loosened the things round the deceased's neck, and I then saw a white wrapper and a red silk handkerchief.

George James Morris, night watchman at Messrs. Kearley and Tonge's tea warehouse, Mitre-square, deposed: On Saturday, Sept. 29, I went on duty at seven o'clock in the evening. I occupied most of my time in cleaning the offices and looking about the warehouse.

The Coroner: What happened about a quarter to two in the morning?—Constable Watkins, who was on the Mitre-square beat, knocked at my door, which was slightly ajar at the time. I was then sweeping the steps down towards the door. The door was pushed when I was about two yards off. I turned round and opened the door wide. The constable said, "For God's sake, mate, come to my assistance." I said, "Stop till I get my lamp. What is the matter?" "Oh, dear," he exclaimed, "here is another woman cut to pieces." I asked where, and he replied, "In the corner." I went into the corner of the square and turned my light on the body. I agree with the previous witnesses as to the position of the body. I ran up Mitre-street into Aldgate, blowing my whistle all the while.

Did you see any suspicious persons about?—No. Two constables came up and asked what was the matter. I told them to go down to Mitre-square, as there was another terrible murder. They went, and I followed and took charge of my own premises again.

Before being called by Constable Watkins, had you heard any noise in the square?—No.

If there had been any cry of distress, would you have heard it from where you were?—Yes.

By the Jury: I was in the warehouse facing the corner of the square.

By Mr. Crawford: Before being called I had no occasion to go into the square. I did not go there between one and two o'clock; of that I am certain. There was nothing unusual in my door being open and my being at work at so late an hour. I had not seen Watkins before during the night. I do not think my door had been ajar more than two or three minutes when he knocked.

James Harvey, City constable, 964: On the night of Saturday, Sept. 29, I was on duty in the neighbourhood of Houndsditch and Aldgate. I was there at the time of the murder, but did not see any one nor hear any cry. When I got into Aldgate, returning towards Duke-street, I heard a whistle and saw the witness Morris with a lamp. I asked him what was the matter, and he told me that a woman had been ripped up in Mitre-square. Together with Constable Hollins I went to Mitre-square, where Watkins was by the side of the body of the deceased. Hollins went for Dr. Sequeira, and a private individual was despatched for other constables, who arrived almost immediately, having heard the whistle. I waited with Watkins, and information was sent to the inspector.

At what time previous to that were you in Aldgate?—At twenty-eight minutes past one o'clock I passed the post-office clock.

George Clapp, caretaker at No. 5, Mitre-street, deposed: The back part of the house looks into Mitre-square. On the night of Saturday week last I retired to rest in the back room on the second floor about eleven o'clock.

The Coroner: During the night did you hear any disturbance in the square?—No.

When did you first learn that a murder had been perpetrated?—Between five and six o'clock in the morning.

By Mr. Crawford: A nurse, who was in attendance upon my wife, was sleeping at the top of the house. No person slept either on the ground floor or the first floor.

Constable Richard Pearce, 922 City: I reside at No. 3, Mitre-square. There are only two private houses in the square. I retired to rest at twenty minutes past twelve on the morning of last Sunday week.

Did you hear any noise in the square?—None at all.

When did you first hear of the murder?—At twenty past two, when I was called by a constable.

From your bedroom window could you see the spot where the murder was committed?—Yes, quite plainly.

By Mr. Crawford: My wife and family were in no way disturbed during the night.

Joseph Lawende: I reside at No. 45, Norfolk-road, Dalston, and am a commercial traveller. On the night of Sept. 29, I was at the Imperial Club, Duke-street, together with Mr. Joseph Levy and Mr. Harry Harris. It was raining, and we sat in the club till half-past one o'clock, when we left. I observed a man and woman together at the corner of Church-passage, Duke-street, leading to Mitre-square.

The Coroner: Were they talking?—The woman was standing with her face towards the man, and I only saw her back. She had one hand on his breast. He was the taller. She had on a black jacket and bonnet. I have seen the articles at the police-station, and believe them to be those the deceased was wearing.

What sort of man was this?—He had on a cloth cap with a peak of the same.

Mr. Crawford: Unless the jury wish it, I do not think further particulars should be given as to the appearance of this man.

The Foreman: The jury do not desire it.

Mr. Crawford (to witness): You have given a description of the man to the police?—Yes.

Would you know him again?—I doubt it. The man and woman were about nine or ten feet away from me. I have no doubt it was half-past one o'clock when we rose to leave the club, so that it would be twenty-five minutes to two o'clock when we passed the man and woman.

Did you overhear anything that either said?—No.

Did either appear in an angry mood?—No.

Did anything about their movements attract your attention?—No. The man looked rather rough and shabby.

When the woman placed her hand on the man's breast, did she do it as if to push him away?—No; it was done very quietly.

You were not curious enough to look back and see where they went.—No.

Mr. Joseph Hyam Levy, the butcher in Hutcheson-street, Aldgate, stated: I was with the last witness at the Imperial Club on Saturday night, Sept. 29. We got up to leave at half-past one on Sunday morning, and came out three or four minutes later. I saw a man and woman standing at the corner of Church-passage, but I did not take any notice of them. I passed on, thinking they were up to no good at so late an hour.

What height was the man?—I should think he was three inches taller than the woman, who was, perhaps, 5ft high. I cannot give any further description of them. I went down Duke-street into Aldgate, leaving them still talking together.

By the Jury: The point in the passage where the man and woman were standing was not well lighted. On the contrary, I think it was badly lighted then, but the light is much better now.

By Mr. Crawford: Nothing in what I saw excited my suspicion as to the intentions of the man. I did not hear a word that he uttered to the woman.

Your fear was rather about yourself?—Not exactly. (Laughter.)

Constable Alfred Long, 254 A, Metropolitan police: I was on duty in Goulston-street, Whitechapel, on Sunday morning, Sept. 30, and about five minutes to three o'clock I found a portion of a white apron (produced). There were recent stains of blood on it. The apron was lying in the passage leading to the staircase of Nos. 108 to 119, a model dwelling-house. Above on the wall was written in chalk, "The Jews are the men that will not be blamed for nothing." I at once searched the staircase and areas of the building, but did not find anything else. I took the apron to Commercial-road Police-station and reported to the inspector on duty.

Had you been past that spot previously to your discovering the apron?—I passed about twenty minutes past two o'clock.

Are you able to say whether the apron was there then?—It was not.

Mr. Crawford: As to the writing on the wall, have you not put a "not" in the wrong place? Were not the words, "The Jews are not the men that will be blamed for nothing"?—I believe the words were as I have stated.

Was not the word "Jews" spelt "Juwes?"—It may have been.

Yet you did not tell us that in the first place. Did you make an entry of the words at the time?—Yes, in my pocket-book.

Is it possible that you have put the "not" in the wrong place?—It is possible, but I do not think that I have.

Which did you notice first—the piece of apron or the writing on the wall?—The piece of apron, one corner of which was wet with blood.

How came you to observe the writing on the wall?—I saw it while trying to discover whether there were any marks of blood about.

Did the writing appear to have been recently done?—I could not form an opinion.

Do I understand that you made a search in the model dwelling-house?—I went into the staircases.

Did you not make inquiries in the house itself?—No.

The Foreman: Where is the pocket-book in which you made the entry of the writing?—At Westminster.

Is it possible to get it at once?—I dare say.

Mr. Crawford: I will ask the coroner to direct that the book be fetched.

The Coroner: Let that be done.

Daniel Halse, detective officer, City police: On Saturday, Sept. 29, pursuant to instructions received at the central office in Old Jewry, I directed a number of police in plain clothes to patrol the streets of the City all night. At two minutes to two o'clock on the Sunday morning, when near Aldgate Church, in company with Detectives Outram and Marriott, I heard that a woman had been found murdered in Mitre-square. We ran to the spot, and I at once gave instructions for the neighbourhood to be searched and every man stopped and examined. I myself went by way of Middlesex-street into Wentworth-street, where I stopped two men, who, however, gave a satisfactory account of themselves. I came through Goulston-street about twenty minutes past two, and then returned to Mitre-square, subsequently going to the mortuary. I saw the deceased, and noticed that a portion of her apron was missing. I accompanied Major Smith back to Mitre-square, when we heard that a piece of apron had been found in Goulston-street. After visiting Leman-street police-station, I proceeded to Goulston-street, where I saw some chalk-writing on the black facia of the wall. Instructions were given to have the writing photographed, but before it could be done the Metropolitan police stated that they thought the writing might cause a riot or outbreak against the Jews, and it was decided to have it rubbed out, as the people were already bringing out their stalls into the street. When Detective Hunt returned inquiry was made at every door of every tenement of the model dwelling-house, but we gained no tidings of any one who was likely to have been the murderer.

By Mr. Crawford: At twenty minutes past two o'clock I passed over the spot where the piece of apron was found, but did not notice anything then. I should not necessarily have seen the piece of apron.

As to the writing on the wall, did you hear anybody suggest that the word "Jews" should be rubbed out and the other words left?—I did. The fear on the part of the Metropolitan police that the writing might cause riot was the sole reason why it was rubbed out. I took a copy of it, and what I wrote down was as follows: "The Juwes are not the men who will be blamed for nothing."

Did the writing have the appearance of having been recently done?—Yes. It was written with white chalk on a black facia.

The Foreman: Why was the writing really rubbed out?—Witness: The Metropolitan police said it might create a riot, and it was their ground.

Mr. Crawford: I am obliged to ask this question. Did you protest against the writing being rubbed out?—Witness: I did. I asked that it might, at all events, be allowed to remain until Major Smith had seen it.

Why do you say that it seemed to have been recently written?—It looked fresh, and if it had been done long before it would have been rubbed out by the people passing. I did not notice whether there was any powdered chalk on the ground, though I did look about to see if a knife could be found. There were three lines of writing in a good schoolboy's round hand. The size of the capital letters would be about ¾in, and the other letters were in proportion. The writing was on the black bricks, which formed a kind of dado, the bricks above being white.

Mr. Crawford: With the exception of a few questions to Long, the Metropolitan constable, that is the whole of the evidence I have to offer at the present moment on the part of the City police. But if any point occurs to the coroner or the jury I shall be happy to endeavour to have it cleared up.

A Juror: It seems surprising that a policeman should have found the piece of apron in the passage of the buildings, and yet made no inquiries in the buildings themselves. There was a clue up to that point, and then it was altogether lost.

Mr. Crawford: As to the premises being searched, I have in court members of the City police who did make diligent search in every part of the tenements the moment the matter came to their knowledge. But unfortunately it did not come to their knowledge until two hours after. There was thus delay, and the man who discovered the piece of apron is a member of the Metropolitan police.

A Juror: It is the man belonging to the Metropolitan police that I am complaining of.

At this point Constable Long returned, and produced the pocket-book containing the entry which he made at the time concerning the discovery of the writing on the wall.

Mr. Crawford: What is the entry?—Witness: The words are, "The Jews are the men that will not be blamed for nothing."

Both here and in your inspector's report the word "Jews" is spelt correctly?—Yes; but the inspector remarked that the word was spelt "Juwes."

Why did you write "Jews" then?—I made my entry before the inspector made the remark.

But why did the inspector write "Jews"?—I cannot say.

At all events, there is a discrepancy?—It would seem so.

What did you do when you found the piece of apron?—I at once searched the staircases leading to the buildings.

Did you make inquiry in any of the tenements of the buildings?—No.

How many staircases are there?—Six or seven.

And you searched every staircase?—Every staircase to the top.

You found no trace of blood or of recent footmarks?—No.

About what time was that?—Three o'clock.

Having examined the staircases, what did you next do?—I proceeded to the station.

Before going did you hear that a murder had been committed?—Yes.

It is common knowledge that two murders have been perpetrated. Which did you hear of?—I heard of the murder in the City. There were rumours of another, but not certain.

When you went away did you leave anybody in charge?—Yes; the constable on the next beat—190, H Division—but I do not know his name.

Did you give him any instructions as to what he was to do?—I told him to keep observation on the dwelling house, and see if any one entered or left.

When did you return?—About five o'clock.

Had the writing been rubbed out then?—No; it was rubbed out in my presence at half-past five.

Did you hear any one object to its being rubbed out?—No. It was nearly daylight when it was rubbed out.

A Juror: Having examined the apron and the writing, did it not occur to you that it would be wise to search the dwelling?—I did what I thought was right under the circumstances.

The Juror: I do not wish to say anything to reflect upon you, because I consider that altogether the evidence of the police redounds to their credit; but it does seem strange that this clue was not followed up.

Witness: I thought the best thing to do was to proceed to the station and report to the inspector on duty.

The Juror: I am sure you did what you deemed best.

Mr. Crawford: I suppose you thought it more likely to find the body there than the murderer?—Witness: Yes, and I felt that the inspector would be better able to deal with the matter than I was.

The Foreman: Was there any possibility of a stranger escaping from the house?—Not from the front.

Did you not know about the back?—No, that was the first time I had been on duty there.

That being all the evidence forthcoming,

The coroner said he considered a further adjournment unnecessary, and the better plan would be for the jury to return their verdict and then leave the matter in the hands of the police. In summing up it would not be at all necessary for him to go through the testimony of the various witnesses, but if the jury wanted their memories refreshed on any particular point he would assist them by referring to the evidence on that point. That the crime was a most fiendish one could not for a moment be doubted, for the miscreant, not satisfied with taking a defenceless woman's life, endeavoured so to mutilate the body as to render it unrecognisable. He presumed that the jury would return a verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown, and then the police could freely pursue their inquiries and follow up any clue they might obtain. A magnificent reward had been offered, and that might be the means of setting people on the track and bringing to speedy justice the creature who had committed this atrocious crime. On reflection, perhaps it would be sufficient to return a verdict of wilful murder against some person unknown, inasmuch as the medical evidence conclusively demonstrated that only one person could be implicated.

The jury at once returned a verdict accordingly.

The coroner, for himself and the jury, thanked Mr. Crawford and the police for the assistance they had rendered in the inquiry.

Mr. Crawford: The police have simply done their duty.

The Coroner: I am quite sure of that.

The jury having presented their fees to Annie Phillips, daughter of the deceased, the proceedings terminated.

In an article on law and order in London the Pall Mall Gazette says:

"What is the duty of Society in view of such an alarming collapse of authority? We do not ask what is the duty of the Home Secretary, because whatever it is he will not do it. He will remain passive, surveying the scene of anarchy and plunder with the same serenity of soul that he has displayed ever since he became Home Secretary. Neither do we ask what is the duty of Sir Charles Warren. If it is left to him he will probably ask for more constables and more drill. But we appeal to the members for London, to the bishops and clergy, established and non-established, to the vestrymen, to the shopkeepers, and to all those who take an interest in maintaining at least some outward semblance of honesty in our streets, to use the present opportunity to demand that the whole force shall be put on a sounder footing and under more intelligent direction. If it is necessary to have more constables, by all means let us have more constables; but it is not much use entrusting more police to a major-general whose one idea seems to be the conversion of the thief-takers and crime-preventers of London into a semi-military force, charged primarily with the suppression of public meetings. Already there are symptoms that even the long-suffering London tradesman is beginning to turn at last. In every other town in the land the tradesmen practically have the police in their own hands. In London only, where surely our tradespeople are not behind those of the provinces in energy and intelligence, the shopkeepers have no more voice in the control of the force than if they were paupers in the workhouse. We appeal to all decent, honest men and women, without distinction of party or of religion, to unite in crushing this foul epidemic of rascality and roguery which converts great thoroughfares into so many Alsatias of the lawless desperadoes of the slums."

At the Thames Police-court, yesterday, John Pizer, who, it will be remembered, was arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the Hanbury-street murder, but afterwards released, summoned Emily Patzwold for assaulting him.—Pizer stated on the previous Thursday he went out to get some cheese for his breakfast, when he met defendant, who made use of an insulting expression and called him "Leather Apron." He took no notice, and walked on. When he returned she struck him three blows in the face, and his hat was knocked off; while he was picking it up she again struck him. Some neighbours came to witness's assistance and got him away. He told his brother of what had occurred, and he reported the matter to the police.—Defendant said complainant struck her and knocked her hat off, and she then struck him.—After hearing evidence on each side, Mr. Lushington said he had no doubt defendant struck complainant in the face. She would be fined 10s, and 2s costs.

MIDDLESEX LICENSING SESSIONS.

An adjourned meeting of the Middlesex magistrates was held in the Court-house, Clerkenwell-green, yesterday, under the presidency of Sir Francis Morley, for the purpose of considering applications for music and dancing licences. There was a large attendance of justices.

"DONNYBROOK FAIR."

Mr. Poland and Mr. Grain, on behalf of Mr. Vincent, secretary of the National Agricultural Hall Company, better known as "Olympia," applied for a renewal of a music licence for the grounds attached to the hall, now occupied by the Irish Exhibition. Opposition was made by adjoining freeholders, and by a large number of residents in the neighbourhood, on account of the noise and annoyance occasioned by the exhibition.—Mr. Poland said he was sorry to find that a petition against the renewal of the licence had been signed by residents close by, but he trusted the magistrates would come to the conclusion that the company were not to blame and should not be deprived of their licence. "Olympia," including the grounds, was let to the promoters of the Irish Exhibition. The grounds were used for the purpose of music and recreation, and there was given in them the representation of an attack on an Irish castle, accompanied with the firing of rifles, crackers, fireworks, &c. In this way, no doubt, a good deal of noise was created, and annoyance caused to the inhabitants, and on that ground the proprietors of Olympia were exceedingly sorry that they parted so far with the control of the grounds for the purpose of the exhibition; but they had no power to step in until the contract expired on the 28th inst. When, however, it was found that the neighbours complained, pressure was put on the gentlemen who managed the Irish Exhibition to reduce the charges of powder used at the siege of the castle, and in this way a very considerable mitigation of the noise had been effected.

Mr. Gill, on behalf of a number of the tenants of houses in Girdler's-road, strongly opposed the renewal of the licence, pointing out that at first the licence was obtained on the representation that the grounds were to be laid out as an ornamental park, in which high-class music was to be played, and such games as croquet and lawn-tennis engaged in. Instead of the vision of select and decorous amusement being realised, everything conceivable had been brought to the place to annoy residents in the neighbourhood, who were prevented from enjoying a minute's quietude in their own homes. There was a toboganning slide, a switchback railway, a rifle gallery, a merry-go-round, and, indeed, every possible abomination a showman could find had been collected upon this spot. As a grand finale, they organised a contest of brass bands. This filled the cup of misery full to overflowing, for the horror of being compelled to listen to a contest of brass bands was sufficient to destroy in the unfortunate residents all desire ever to hear another piece of music of any description in their lives. It seemed to be part of the amusement of the toboggan and switchback railway that the ladies should shriek, which made the gentlemen hold on to their fair partners more tightly, causing them, of course, to scream more loudly still.

Mr. Vincent, a resident in Girdler's-road, gave evidence as to the great annoyance caused by the bands, the siege of the Irish Castle, &c. The only connection the shows on the grounds had with the Irish Exhibition seemed to be their likeness to "Donnybrook Fair."

Sir Francis Morley: Were you very much annoyed by one of the bands from Ireland playing the National Anthem. (Laughter.)

Mr. Vincent: No, sir; I was away from home when that incident occurred.

Mr. Peile and Mr. Mead, as representing freeholders, and other residents, also opposed the licence on the same grounds as Mr. Gill.

Mr. Poland then called Mr. Vincent, secretary of the company, who deposed that every attention was paid to the representations of the neighbours, and the annoyance had now been reduced to a minimum. There was much less powder used in the attack on the castle than formerly.

Sir Francis Morley: It seems that it is an attack upon an Irish castle situated in Ireland. (Laughter.)

By a considerable majority the magistrates refused the licence.

THE ALEXANDRA PALACE.

Mr. Lumley Smith, Q.C., with whom were Mr. Poland, Mr. Besley, and Mr. Grain, asked for the renewal of the music licence for the Alexandra Palace, which was adjourned from the previous sitting of the Court, not because of any opposition, but to allow the magistrates time to consider whether Professor Baldwin's "Drop from Cloudland" came within the scope of a resolution passed by the magistrates in 1880 against exhibitions dangerous to life or limb being allowed on any licensed premises. Mr. Lumley Smith explained that on this occasion there was still no opposition to the renewal of the licence, and he hoped to be able to show them that the feats of Professor Baldwin did not come within the resolution of 1880. The music licence was of course entirely independent of Mr. Baldwin's ascents, and was required for effectually carrying on the entertainments given at the Palace. Danger was, of course, a thing of degree. They should bear in mind that the Legislature had never interfered to say what elements of danger should induce it to declare anything illegal, except when children were concerned. With that exception, each case must be judged on its own merits. Every gentleman who went across country after a fox was to a certain extent exposing himself to an unnecessary degree of danger, so was a man who swam out of his depth. Acrobats on a trapeze, ascents in an ordinary balloon, all involved an element of danger. As a matter of fact, a descent in a parachute was absolutely safer than a descent in an ordinary balloon, because there was less risk of being dragged across fields and dashed against trees. Perhaps one of the reasons why the descent in a parachute was regarded by some as dangerous was because it was novel, but in reality the problem of the parachute had for many years been engaging the attention of men both in England and America. Balloons had been found of extreme value for scientific purposes, and were used both in the American and Franco-German wars. They were supposed to have a great future before them. The feasibility of making descents from balloons at any required spot had been engaging the attention of many.

Sir Francis Morley: The question is whether the performance is dangerous or not. There is no science or anything of the kind for us to consider.

Mr. Lumley Smith assured the magistrates that there was no reckless risk on the part of Professor Baldwin, whose parachute was so simple that its safe working depended solely upon the force of gravity and the elasticity of the air.

Sir Francis Morley: We see all about that in the papers every day.

Mr. Lumley Smith was afraid that if the magistrates took their opinions from the papers they might be misled, and therefore he was anxious that they should know what the performance really was.

Sir Francis Morley: Is it not advertised as a "perilous descent," and that sort of thing, so as to induce people to think that it is dangerous?

Mr. Lumley Smith hoped the magistrates would not withdraw the licence merely because sensational advertisements had appeared about this matter. When Professor Baldwin went up he was firmly attached to the balloon, and when he left the balloon he was firmly attached to the parachute, and he descended so gently that there was no shock of any kind. The one thing supposed to make the performance dangerous was in great part due to the imagination of the spectators. Twenty descents had been made without a hitch.

Sir Francis Morley: What about last Thursday?

Mr. Lumley Smith explained that what occurred then had nothing to do with the parachute. All that took place was this. Some one got hold of the balloon so that it could not ascend fairly. It was seen to be making a course towards some trees, which might have been a source of danger, and the moment Mr. Baldwin saw that he simply got off the balloon and did not go up. These ascents are never made unless Mr. Baldwin is perfectly certain that the tackle and everything is in good order, and, so far from the little hitch on Thursday being taken as a proof of danger, he relied upon it as showing that everything was done with the greatest possible care.

Mr. Thomas Scott Baldwin, examined by Mr. Poland, said: I am twenty-eight years of age, and an American citizen. I describe myself as a practical aeronaut.

You experimented some time with this parachute before you tried it in public?—I did.

And made many and many descents in order to satisfy yourself that it was a safe thing to do?—Yes.

In America you have gone up in a balloon, and descended with the parachute?—Yes; twelve times.

At the Alexandra Palace twenty-one times?—Yes; also twice at Birmingham, once at Manchester, once at Leeds, and at Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Nottingham.

In your judgment do you consider a descent in your parachute quite safe?—I consider the descent in the parachute much safer than a descent in a balloon.

It is so arranged that the moment you detach yourself from the balloon it goes up suddenly, and you descend?—That's the idea. I will undertake to demonstrate to you gentlemen in a few words the practicability of the parachute.

Sir Francis Morley: I think the Court will not trouble you to do that.

Mr. Poland: The moment you touch the ground there is no resistance?—Exactly.

No danger of being dragged through trees?—No.

And thus it is much safer than a balloon?—That's the idea.

Just tell us what took place last Thursday?—With regard to last Thursday I did not get off the ground at all. I saw that the balloon was dragging along towards some trees, and might throw me against a fence, and consequently I just left the balloon.

I suppose you only go up when the weather is safe?—I use my own judgment as regards the weather.

And you can guide the parachute so as to descend where you wish?—That's the idea.

Sir E. Galsworthy: Have you hold of your parachute simply by your hands?—I may say that a great many times I do hold on by my hands. Sometimes I have used a rope; but, with regard to holding on by my hands, I may say, as an old gymnast, that, once I laid hold of it with my hand, it would be as impossible for me to slip my hold as it would be for one of you gentlemen to get up to make a speech and find your mind desert you. (Laughter.) There is no danger of a gymnast letting go, once he gets his hold.

Mr. Besley, on behalf of the Financial Association, pointed out that the licence should be treated quite separately from Professor Baldwin's performance.

Sir Francis Morley: If we renew the licence, will you undertake to prohibit these performances?

Mr. Besley: I should like the Bench to vote upon whether these performances should be prohibited or not, and, if the Bench says they ought, we will surrender our judgment.

Sir Francis Morley said he would put the question simply whether the music licence should be renewed.

On the show of hands being taken, the licence was renewed by a large majority, there being apparently only three hands held up against it. The result was received with applause from many persons in court.

THE NAVY.—At the Admiralty yesterday the following appointments were announced: Lieutenants—Claude William M. Plenderleath, to the Penelope, additional in command of torpedo boat No. 23; Lionel Herbert Hordern, to the Penelope, additional in command of torpedo boat No. 29 (both to date 23rd inst.); Joseph John M'Cance Calwell and William Wright to the Penelope (to date 23rd inst.); Richard Sydney B. Bird, to the Brisk (to date 11th inst.). Staff-Commander—George John Hirtzel, to the Penelope (to date 23rd inst.) Gunners—Daniel Sullivan, to the Sanspareil; William Sledge, to the Victoria; James Oliver, to the Gannet; William Henry Taylor, to the Hydra (all to date 11th inst.); Edwin Pratt, to the Penelope; James Patrick Burden, to the Alecto (both to date 23rd inst.). Boatswains—William Cottee, to the Victoria; William Henry Pound, to the Sanspareil; Edmund James A. Baker, to the Watchful (all to date 11th inst.); Richard Channon, to the Penelope (to date 23rd inst.)

A USEFUL HINT.—If British housekeepers, instead of purchasing the commonest of common matches, because they are low priced and thought to be cheap, would use none but matches bearing Bryant and May's name, they would not only get the best value for their money, but would enable Bryant and May to pay thousands of pounds more weekly in wages; and in that way the British housekeepers would be doing real good to the working classes of the East-end of London.—(ADVERTISEMENT.)

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Mr. Richard Mansfield has determined to abandon the "Creepy Drama," evidently beloved in America, in favour of wholesome comedy. The murderous Hyde will peer round the drawing-room windows and leap at his victim's throat for the last time during the forthcoming week; and in a few days we shall see no more at the Lyceum of the old satyr Baron Chevrial, who lives to love, and dies making hideous grimaces in an apoplectic fit. Experience has taught this clever young actor that there is no taste in London just now for horrors on the stage. There is quite sufficient to make us shudder out of doors.

On Friday next Mr. Mansfield will give the receipts of a full evening performance to aid the Bishop of Bedford's Home and Refuge Fund for the Poor of the East-end of London, and has on courteous representation abandoned his original idea of helping the Shelters, which are supposed by those in authority to do more harm than good in the desire to alleviate pressing distress. On this occasion will be performed for the first time in this country "Prince Karl," a play that attracted considerable attention in America, both on its own merits and on account of Mr. Mansfield's acting and singing in a light and sympathetic character. It is interesting to learn that it was the success of this piece which gave the author, Mr. A. C. Gunter, courage to write and produce "Mr. Barnes of New York" and "Mr. Potter of Texas." If "Prince Karl" contains the same strong dramatic grip that permeates Mr. Gunter's subsequent stories, few will regret Mr. Mansfield's determination to show us, before he leaves England, a pleasant side of human nature in contrast to the monsters he has conjured up.

The innumerable friends of Mr. J. L. Toole will be glad to hear that so far he has met with greater success than ever on his provincial tour, particularly in such important theatrical centres as Birmingham, Leeds, Liverpool, Plymouth, Dublin, and Cork. "The Don" and "The Butler" have been cordially received wherever they appeared, for Mr. Toole is as much at home in college cap and gown as he is in livery. Towards the end of the month Mr. Toole will be in Edinburgh, and when there will be the guest of the celebrated "Pen and Pencil Club," so we may expect the views of our popular comedian on society and the stage from a distinctly humorous point of view.

Mr. Pinero is anxious not to be misunderstood. Regarding the disputed termination to his latest comedy, "The Weaker Sex," he says: "As a matter of fact, I have arrived at no conclusion in the matter. I am waiting the result of the presentation of the play before other audiences, and am praying for enlightenment. But whatever decision I ultimately arrive at as to the fate of Lady Vivash and those surrounding her, 'The Weaker Sex' will be offered to a London audience—if the play ever reaches London at all—with a last act carefully reconsidered, and, in parts, amended. And should I still hazard to maintain my present theory that it is probable and consistent that Lady Vivash's long and faithful love for Philip Lyster lasts not much longer than the hope that she is loved in return, the illustration of this will be presented in a less frivolous and trivial form as a result of the kindly interest shown by my critics and friends upon the original production of the play."

Miss Edith Chester, a young lady who had scarcely made her entrance on the stage ere she "retired to be married," is not the first actress who has quickly returned to her first love and resolved to resume her profession. She has been selected by Mr. Pinero to play "Sweet Lavender" in his comedy, now in the full tide of its success at Terry's Theatre, and Mr. H. Reeves Smith takes the part of Clement Hale in the place of Mr. Bernard Gould.

Miss Wallis, the Shakespearian actress, will inaugurate the new theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue next Saturday with a performance of "As You Like It," with new scenery by Mr. Henry Emden, costumes designed by Glindoni, and the musical arrangements under the direction of Mr. G. W. Byng. The cast of the play has been carefully and judiciously selected. Mr. Forbes Robertson will play Orlando; Mr. Arthur Stirling, Jaques; Mr. William Farren, Old Adam; Mr. Mackintosh, Touchstone; Mr. J. R. Crauford, the Banished Duke; Mr. Charles Cooper, Oliver; Mr. Matthew Brodie, Silvius; Mr. Seymour Lucas, of the Carl Rosa Opera Company, Amiens (with songs); Miss Annie Rose, Celia; Miss Kate Fayne, Phœbe; Mrs. Edward Saker, Audrey; and, of course, Miss Wallis as Rosalind. The last time "As You Like It" was revived in London on a grand scale was at the St. James's Theatre by Messrs. Hare and Kendal, on Jan. 24, 1885, when Mrs. Kendal played Rosalind and Mr. Hare Touchstone.

The "Union Jack" is likely to wave over the walls of the Adelphi for many months to come, and this popular theatre is nightly crowded. But the Messrs. Gatti show their wisdom in being prepared for a rainy day. They have accordingly commissioned Mr. George R. Sims and Mr. Henry Pettitt to write the next Adelphi drama, and we may be sure that these experienced dramatists will steer clear this time of the army and the navy. Perhaps they have in contemplation a racing drama, or will relate anew their experiences of London life. There will be a slight change in the cast of the "Union Jack" to-morrow. Miss Olga Nethersole, who so successfully played a pathetic character, goes to the St. James's Theatre, to appear in the "Dean and his Daughter," and her place will be taken by Miss Dorothy Dene.

Mr. Thomas Thorne has requested Mr. Robert Buchanan to write another comedy of old English manners, to follow "Joseph's Sweetheart" when the Vaudeville audiences grow weary of this excellent dramatic rendering of Henry Fielding's novel. There will be a slight change in the programme next Thursday, when several influential friends have promised to pay a personal compliment to Mr. Sydney Alport, Mr. Thorne's right-hand man and courteous acting manager. On this occasion the comedy will commence at eight o'clock, and those who wait after that will hear Mr. Arthur Roberts, Miss Florence St. John, and Miss Fanny Joyce sing, Mr. Radcliff play the flute, and several recitations from popular artists.

Having succeeded beyond all expectation with "Uncles and Aunts," a play that crowds the Comedy Theatre mainly owing to the drollery of Mr. Penley, Mr. Hawtrey has made arrangements to produce at the Strand Theatre a novelty in the way of a three-act sporting burlesque, which he has had by him for some time and believes in thoroughly. Possibly this skit of modern manners will be called "Venus," but the title has not been definitely arranged.

Mr. Alfred Calmour, encouraged by the success of his poetic little dramas—notably the "Amber Heart," which gave Miss Ellen Terry one of the most beautiful characters in her répertoire—has ventured on a three-act comedy of eighteenth-century life. It is called "The Widow Winsome," and will be tried at a Criterion matinée, with the encouragement of Mr. Charles Wyndham, on Nov. 15. The author has been lucky enough to secure a strong cast, for Miss Kate Rorke has promised to play the winsome widow, and Mr. H. B. Conway and Mr. William Farren will give their assistance. The play, of course, is original, and it will be as well dressed as if it were put on the stage for a run.

Already we are promised a winter crop of matinées. The first on the list will take place next Wednesday at the Criterion, when a three-act comedy drama, called "Blackmail," will be arranged for the stage by Mr. William Sidney. The cast contains the names of Miss Annie Irish, Miss Measor, Miss Gabrielle Goldney, Mr. J. G. Grahame, Mr. Royce Carleton, and Mr. Arthur Williams. A nom de plume conceals the identity of Dr. Dabbs, a well-known practitioner in the Isle of Wight.

Mr. Corney Grain, who has been travelling and keeping his observant eye open, will be ready with his latest society sketch at St. George's Hall next Monday. It will be called "John Bull Abroad."

All who are interested in the production of a grand spectacular play and the difficulties an artist has to contend with in soothing the susceptibilities of fanciful actresses and of actors who only feel at home in nineteenth-century attire, should read the Hon. Lewis Wingfield's essay, "Art in the Theatre," recently published in the "Magazine of Art." He tells us with great good humour the trouble he has encountered with slouching young men who cannot or will not adapt themselves to stiff Georgian costume, and with unamenable young ladies whose drapery becomes so unmanageable that, instead of setting off their figures, it brings them down on their noses. All that Mr. Wingfield says is derived from practical experience.

Mr. W. H. Stephens, a well-known actor of "old men," who was to have played Old Adam in "As You Like It," at the new Shaftesbury Theatre next week, dropped dead on his knees as he was praying at mass last Sunday morning at the pretty Catholic church at Brook-green. Mr. Stephens made his first appearance on the stage at the Theatre Royal, Derby, on April 11, 1839. In 1854 he left England for Australia, and at Sydney built the Queen's Theatre. He has visited during his long and honourable career San Francisco, New York, and Calcutta, and since 1861 has played at nearly all the principal theatres of London, from Sir Peter Teazle to the bamboozled old gentleman of farcical comedy.

The date for the production of the new comic opera, "Paul Jones," at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, is now definitely fixed for Jan. 12. "Dorothy" will be withdrawn in December, after having reached the unprecedented total of over 800 performances. Mr. Carl Rosa then unites the cares of management with Mr. Horace Sedger, to produce not less than three light operas. The first is "Paul Jones," composed by M. Planquette; the second has been written by Mr. Goring Thomas; and the third will probably be by one of these composers. If the success of "Dorothy" continues it will be transferred to the new Lyric Theatre.

We hear that the part of Paul Jones has been assigned to a new contralto who is credited with a very fine voice and presence. If a recent precedent for this step be demanded, the inquirer is referred to a performance, by Madame Ugalde, of the baritone part in Victor Massé's "Galatea."

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Wilson Barrett, who is playing at Cardiff, was invited to a banquet at the Royal Hotel, presided over by the Mayor of the town, and attended by sixty representatives of literature, art, law, and commerce. Incidentally it was mentioned that Mr. Barrett had performed with success at the old Cardiff Theatre twenty-three years ago. In his speech of thanks the guest observed that "the occasion would be to him another incentive to work, another proof that honest endeavour, however far it might fall short of its own ideal, was recognised, encouraged, and rewarded."

Theatre parties are already a feature of modern society. Last night forty stalls were secured at the Savoy Theatre for the wedding guests, bridesmaids, and friends of Sir Joseph Weston, the "Dick Whittington" Mayor of Bristol, and formerly representative of that ancient city in Parliament, who was yesterday married at St. Mary Abbot's, Kensington, to Miss Annie Beloe, the youngest daughter of a once well-known and honoured Bristol citizen. Sir Joseph and Lady Weston, who entertained their friends at Bailey's Hotel, Kensington, in the afternoon, left early for Dover, en route to the Continent, and the wedding party assembled in full force to enjoy the humour of Mr. W. S. Gilbert and the music of Sir Arthur Sullivan in "The Yeomen of the Guard."

Mr. J. H. B. Dando writes, with reference to a remark that the late Mr. John Ella was the first to establish a regular series of chamber concerts in London. He claims the credit of this achievement for himself, and says: "In 1841, my quartet concerts were given at Crosby Hall, Bishopsgate-street, and given there annually till the end of 1859, when the lease fell in and I left. The dates will show that I gave classical concerts devoted to chamber music from September, 1835, to 1859. The Musical Union was not founded by Mr. Ella till 1845, ten years after my first series had taken place." Mr. Dando naturally adds, "I feel that I ought not to be deprived of the credit of my well-doing," and because we feel the same, publicity is here given to the facts. In his active days Mr. Dando was a better violinist than Mr. Ella, but it is doubtful whether he was a better showman. Otherwise he would not have remained in the semi-obscurity of Crosby Hall.

What will music-lovers say to the idea of Mr. Edward Lloyd upon the operatic stage? Probably it has never been presented to them as involving even a possibility; but the unexpected always happens, and we may before long see our English tenor in the glare of the footlights. A first step to this end has been taken by Mr. Augustus Harris, who recently made Mr. Lloyd a very tempting offer for the next season at Covent-garden, which was declined solely because the singer's many engagements between now and next May allow no time for study. It is not at all improbable, however, that Mr. Lloyd may go upon the stage in connection with his visits to America and Australia, for which negotiations are now pending. Should he do this we shall know soon enough whether he has acted wisely.

Talking of opera, it may be mentioned, on the best authority, that Mr. Carl Rosa's company are having a very good time in the counties; in fact, doing a better business than ever. At Bristol, in spite of the forthcoming festival, the advance booking has been larger than on any previous occasion. The general success of the tour seems favoured by the presentation of spectacular works such as Halévy's "Jewess" ("La Juive"), produced at Plymouth last week, with Miss Fanny Moody as Rachel, and Mr. M'Guckin as Eleazar. Encouraged by the results of this policy, Mr. Rosa will bring forward an English version of Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord" during his season at Liverpool.

Amateurs will be glad to hear that Mr. F. H. Cowen is doing exceedingly well in Melbourne as conductor of the Exhibition concerts. The journals are unanimous in declaring him the right man in the right place, and especially commend the orchestral performances given under his direction. On his part, Mr. Cowen seems to be quite satisfied with the means afforded him. He writes: "Everything is most satisfactory; my forces are really excellent. The band plays with great precision and light and shade, and I am not ashamed to be at its head." Classical concerts are, it appears, given twice a week; all the performances are well attended; and it is felt that lasting good to colonial art will be the result of the enterprise. Up to the end of August, Mr. Cowen's "Song of Thanksgiving" has been thrice performed with unvarying success.

Mr. Otto Fischer, a baritone well known to English concert-goers, is also in Melbourne, the capital, by the way, of his native colony. Mr. Fischer has been playing in opera with great acceptance, and has given vocal recitals to the entire satisfaction of his critics. He was the first winner of Sir Thomas Elder's South Australian scholarship at the Royal College of Music.

The music-loving "masses" of London should look upon themselves just now as in very good case, since purveyors of gratis concerts are competing for their patronage. Two organisations are already in the field for the winter—the Wesleyan West Central Mission opening in Princes' Hall on Saturday last with performances by a complete orchestra and solo vocalists of ability, under the direction of Mr. R. Heath Mills. A similar concert is announced for each Saturday till further notice. There are two interludes in the proceedings—the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, M.A., delivers a short address, and the assistants make a collection. The first is certainly worth hearing; the second should be liberal. On the day following the Wesleyan opening, the People's Concert Society began work in the Westminster Town Hall, with such excellent artists as Mrs. Isabel Fassett and Mr. John Probert (vocalists), Messrs. Wiener, Albert, and Jules Hollander. The programme actually contained Schubert's Grand Trio in B flat, which was given to the audience in two "helpings," one at the beginning of the concert, the other at the end.

Music, most charitable of the arts, is now invoked on behalf of the Railway Guards' Universal Friendly Society, and four concerts will be given next month, for the benefit of its funds, at Manchester, Glasgow, and Edinburgh. The artists engaged are Mrs. Mary Davies, Miss Eleanor Rees, Mr. Piercy, Miss Marion Eissler, the accomplished violinist, and Mr. Bisaccia.

Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Golden Legend," proceeding westward on its triumphal march, has reached San Francisco, and will be performed there by the Handel and Haydn Society in the course of next spring. No doubt the dwellers by the Golden Gate would be glad to welcome the original Prince Henry.

The director of the Russian National Opera Company is to be congratulated upon having a London theatre open to him. Though the stage of the Jodrell (late Novelty) is small for the purpose of grand opera it will afford our Sclavonic visitors an opportunity of showing what they can do, and, it maybe, of commending their lyric drama to favourable notice. As mere concert-givers at the Albert Hall they are grievously handicapped, and altogether out of place. But why select Rubinstein's "Demon" for the opening night? That work is known here, and not loved.

The English musician who prefers to be called Herr Eugen D'Albert—"De gustibus," &c.—is still at work upon his opera, the title and plot of which he, as though they mattered, keeps a secret. Herr D'Albert shortly starts upon a tour through Austria and Russia.

Brahms's new "Zigeunerlieder," for vocal soli with pianoforte accompaniment, will be performed for the first time, in Berlin, next month, at a concert to be given by Mrs. Joachim.

Musical news from Berlin states that Mr. Joachim will shortly start on an artistic tour through Austria. Also that Miss Marie Soldat, the young violinist who was with us last season, has formed a ladies' string quartet, and will give three concerts. She shortly revisits England, where a number of engagements await her.

The Lotus Glee Club, of New York, has been engaged by Mr. Vert for the next London season. This quartet visited England a few months ago, and gave some private performances with remarkable success. Their ensemble is as perfect as possible.

On Wednesday the traffic receipts of the Suez Canal amounted to 150,000f, against 80,000f on the corresponding day of last year.

SIR MORELL MACKENZIE AND THE GERMAN DOCTORS.

We have received from the British Medical Journal the following abstract of Sir Morell Mackenzie's pamphlet; also facsimiles of two MSS. of the late Emperor Frederick:

"Sir Morell Mackenzie's reply is divided into three parts—historical, controversial, and statistical. It contains twenty-one illustrations showing the conditions of the late Emperor's larynx at different periods, the various cannulæ used in the later stages of the case, measurements made by Mr. Hovell with the view of proving the asymmetrical position of the tracheotomy wound, and the lesions which are alleged to have followed the attempts of Professor von Bergmann to push a cannula into the windpipe. Sir Morell Mackenzie deals solely with the medical aspects of the case, without touching on political questions. He complains that he has been refused access to important documents which have been at the disposal of his assailants. In the narrative portion of his work he describes the progress of the case from the time he was called in till the Emperor's death. He denies the allegation that he deceived his Majesty as to his condition, and states that he can bring forward unimpeachable proof of this assertion. He also denies that he ever said the disease was not cancer; all that he did was to point out that that conclusion had been arrived at on insufficient grounds, and that the first step towards a rational diagnosis, namely, the removal of a piece of the growth for microscopic examination, had been omitted by the German physicians. This Sir Morell Mackenzie was able to do, and Professor Virchow gave so favourable a report on the fragments extracted that the proposed radical operation was abandoned, and the case handed over to the English physician. With regard to the charge made against him by Professor Gerhardt of having wounded the right vocal cord in his second operation, Sir Morell points out that such an accident is almost impossible with his forceps. He has never known it to occur even to beginners; and, as a matter of fact, in the case of the Emperor Frederick there was no objective sign of such an injury having been inflicted, nor did the august patient afterwards complain of any pain or discomfort such as he must have felt if the supposed wound had had any existence outside Professor Gerhardt's imagination. Sir Morell Mackenzie accuses the German physician of having made a charge which he knew to be false in order to shake the confidence of the Crown Prince in his new adviser. He maintains that his German colleagues fully share his responsibility for the line of treatment which was adopted, as if they distrusted him they should at once have openly dissociated themselves from him. They made no sign, however; and even as late as the beginning of October Professor von Bergmann is said to have admitted that the course which Sir M. Mackenzie had pursued was the right one. This statement, though made in the most positive manner in our columns (Journal, Nov. 19, 1887, page 1,127), has never been denied by the gentleman in question.

"So far from his having spirited the Crown Prince away to England, as he is accused of having done, Sir M. Mackenzie affirms that the illustrious patient came over to this country, mainly in order to be present at the Queen's Jubilee, in accordance with arrangements made before the English physician had been called in. He complains that Dr. Landgraf was appointed to accompany the Prince without any hint having been given him that that surgeon was one of Professor Gerhardt's assistants.

"Sir Morell Mackenzie describes the clinical incidents of the case very much as they were set forth in these columns at the time. We are admitted behind the scenes at the eventful consultation held at San Remo in the early part of November, when the great crisis in the evolution of the disease occurred. Interesting details are given as to the heroic fortitude with which the Prince received what was in fact a sentence not only of death but of prolonged previous suffering. Amusing sketches are also given of the attitude of the various physicians who took part in the consultation. Our author informs us that on that occasion Dr. Schmidt, so far from thinking the case was one of 'cancer running a normal course,' maintained in opposition to all others that the disease was 'specific,' a notion which Professor Schrötter characterised as 'an old wife's tale.' Notwithstanding this, Dr. Schmidt took an early opportunity of expressing the same opinion in a public lecture at Frankfort—an indiscretion which caused the greatest annoyance to the Prince.

"In describing the tracheotomy, Sir M. Mackenzie admits that the operation was, on the whole, performed by Dr. Bramann in a satisfactory manner, but he affirms that the trachea was opened three millimètres to the right of the middle line. This was proved by Mr. Hovell by an ingenious method of measurement, which is fully described and illustrated. Dr. Bramann inserted a cannula of altogether unusual size and shape. The lower end of this instrument, according to Sir M. Mackenzie, impinged on the posterior wall of the trachea, causing destruction of tissue and intense discomfort, with consequent exhaustion. There was at this time great tension in the relations of the English medical attendants with their German colleagues. Sir M. Mackenzie complains that the latter obstinately refused to listen to his suggestions as to a more suitable tube till it was too late.

"When the case was restored to the English physician, he substituted a Durham's tube for the German cannula, with relatively satisfactory results, but irretrievable mischief had already been done. Professor von Bergmann is accused of having diagnosed secondary cancer of the lung from finding dulness in the back over the liver; Professor Kussmaul had to be brought all the way from Strasburg to convince him of his mistake.

"Sir Morell Mackenzie's account of the events of the fatal April 12 is very different from Professor von Bergmann's. It is substantially the same as was supplied to us at the time by a trustworthy correspondent (Journal, May 12, 1888, p. 1029). The Emperor's own view of the situation is sufficiently expressed in the words which we give elsewhere in his own handwriting. Sir M. Mackenzie does not hesitate to say that Frederick the Third received his death-blow on that occasion. The 'false passage' made by the tube gave rise to extensive suppuration around the trachea, which steadily drained away the remaining strength of the august patient, and shortened his life by about ten months. An interesting statement is made in connection with this subject, that except at the time the 'false passage' was made, and especially when Professor von Bergmann thrust his finger into the wound, the Emperor never suffered any actual pain.

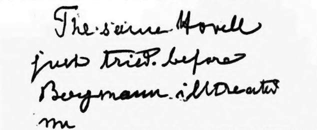
"After the death of Frederick the Third, Sir Morell Mackenzie alleges that an attempt was made to entrap him into a false position. It was settled that there should be no post-mortem examination, and the English physician was urged to give his opinion in writing as to the nature of the disease, in the hope, no doubt, that thinking himself safe from any possible exposure, he would return an ambiguous answer. He disconcerted his enemies, however, by stating unequivocally that the Emperor had suffered from cancer of the larynx.

"In the controversial part of his reply Sir M. Mackenzie contends that thyrotomy in cases of cancer, so far from being free from danger, is in fact a most deadly operation, showing a mortality equivalent to nearly 91 per cent. He also maintains that it is, in the vast majority of cases, inadequate for the complete removal of the growth, which, therefore, speedily returns, the average rate of recurrence being almost 90 per cent. Apart from this, the voice is destroyed or 'modified' in 77·77 of the whole number of cases. Lastly, he argues that in a case of such transcendent importance, it would have been utterly unjustifiable to perform an operation of such a nature without the clearest proof of its necessity. This, he maintains, was not forthcoming till a late period of the illness.

"In dealing individually with his German assailants, Sir M. Mackenzie rejects the testimony of Professor Gerhardt as being that of a discredited rival. He brushes aside the evidence of Dr. Landgraf on the score of want of laryngoscopic skill, which was so marked that the Prince was with difficulty prevented from dismissing him. Dr. Bramann is objected to on the same ground. To the evidence of these inexperienced laryngoscopists is opposed the testimony of experts like Dr. Krause, Dr. Wolfenden, and Mr. Hovell. Professor Gerhardt's 'ruthless cauterisations' on so many consecutive days is condemned in the strongest terms as utterly unexampled in medical practice, and as being likely to irritate the disease, if originally benign, into malignancy.

"The statistical portion exhibits the results of twenty-two cases of thyrotomy for cancer, only two of which were successful; of thirty-five cases of partial excision of the larynx, only one of which was successful; and of 138 cases of total extirpation, only eight of which were successful.

"We (British Medical Journal) have here given, as it were, the 'dry bones' of Sir Morell Mackenzie's argument. There is much in the book, however, apart from its purely medical interest, which makes it worth reading, but on these extraneous subjects it is not within our province to touch. We are able to present facsimiles of two of the last scripts which the Emperor Frederick wrote, which will be, perhaps, of special interest in connection with the summary which we give on another page of the German account of the late Emperor's illness and his treatment by Sir Morell Mackenzie, and that physician's reply, of which the full text will in a few days be published. Both these scripts are in relation to the circumstances connected with the Emperor's illness. They are both of deep significance, each in a different way; they are of unquestionable authenticity. It is our duty, however, to state that Sir Morell Mackenzie is in no way responsible for their publication, nor have we obtained them directly or indirectly from him. The first one needs some explanation to make it intelligible. It is, we understand, a reply to a casual remark of one of the physicians about some alteration in the Emperor's medicine, and the expression was absolutely spontaneous on his Majesty's part, being used simply as a proof that he recognised the draught which had again been prescribed for him. It was written only a day or two before his death. Its chief interest, however, lies in the expression which is given to the view which the Emperor entertained of the incident referred to, but it is, of course, always understood that a patient's view of such circumstances is often far from being the correct one, and such subjective impressions have only a psychological value. The incident to which it refers occurred on April 12.



The same Hovell

"The other script alludes to the death of Mr. Hovell's father, which took place shortly before the Emperor's own. It is a touching proof of his Majesty's extraordinary kindness of heart and thoughtfulness for others even in the last hours of his life.

me, so different in age,

FRUIT SHOW AND CONFERENCE.

Yesterday the October Exhibition of hardy fruit, &c., opened in the north nave of the Crystal Palace. In point of quantity and number of exhibits in the various classes the show is fully up to the mark of its predecessors, though there is rather a falling off in the all-round quality of the apples, pears, and vegetables. The judges, Messrs. A. F. Barron, W. Dean, S. Ford, J. Laing, G. Bunyard, W. Coomber, J. Douglas, J. Shepherd, and W. Earley, made an exhaustive examination of the various classes, and their awards seemed to give complete satisfaction to both competitors and the public. Prior to the publication of the prize list a meeting was held of the British Fruit-Growers Association, Mr. T. F. Rivers being in the chair, when an inaugural address was read by Mr. D. Tallerman, F.R.H.S., in which he drew attention to the difficulty home fruit-growers experience in competing with foreign markets and with American importations, and indicated several practical points that the newly-formed association would direct their attention to. He submitted that the best means by which profitable fruit-culture can be successfully developed in all parts of the United Kingdom is by the formation of local Practical Fruit-Growers' Associations, in connection with the existing Agricultural and Horticultural Societies, Chambers of Agriculture, Farmers' Clubs, and similar organisations that permeate the country; such local societies being brought into a general union by means of a central association in London, affiliated to and co-operating with the existing scientific and other institutions of the Metropolis established for the purpose of aiding horticulture. The British Fruit-Growers' Association should be encouraged and supported in its efforts to effect that work.

The Western Division of the National Union of Conservative Associations will hold its annual meeting at Plymouth, on the 18th inst., and at seven p.m. on the same day there will be a mass meeting, at which the Duke of Beaufort will preside, the principal speakers being Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, M.P., and Sir Edward Clarke, Q.C., M.P.

AN APPEAL FROM THE EAST-END.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—While the public mind is stirred to its depths with horror at the awful revelations of sin and misery which accompany some women's lives in the East-end, it may not come amiss to record also the efforts made for their assistance and for the attainment of a truer ideal of womanhood. Only those who are well acquainted with the existence of the very poor, the sordid details, the unending struggle to make both ends meet and just keep body and soul together, know their dread of sickness, how it cripples their resources and puts the whole machinery of the family out of gear. Especially is this the case at the time of a woman's confinement, when she has worked many hours a day up to the very last, when little or no preparation can be made or extra comfort given in a small garret occupied by a husband and children. Decency, health, or well-being are under such circumstances impossible. To alleviate some of the suffering and supply some of the wants felt, a small lying-in home for respectable married women was established, nearly four years ago, in Shadwell, in the heart of a poverty-stricken and populous neighbourhood, close to the scene of the Whitechapel murders. In all East London there is no lying-in hospital except this little home, which is immensely appreciated by the people. It has already done incalculable good, in refining, helping, and restoring poor women to health. Not one life out of the 327 nursed has been lost, in spite of want of space, many critical cases, and slender means. Assisted by no palatial buildings or expensive staff of officials, the little institution offers what it aims at—a real home, clean, orderly, decent, where privacy (each woman has her own room), food, and medicine, together with skilled attendance and good care may be obtained. If such houses of refuge were multiplied all over East London, and well supported, they would prove most beneficial to the health and morals of the population. Our funds are at the lowest ebb, however, and winter coming on; we therefore appeal confidently to your readers for their generous help and sympathy. Donations thankfully received by Mrs. Ashton Warner, the Mothers' Home, Glamis-road, Shadwell, E., who is the lady superintendent; or by the London and Westminster Bank, St. James's-square.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NEWMARKET NOTES.

So far the interest in the Newmarket Second October Meeting has been sustained without the least flagging, and the fourth day furnished plenty of good sport. In the morning a thick mist covered the training grounds, and considerably interfered with the favourite amusement of amateur touting. Later on the sun struggled through, and had the atmosphere been a little clearer the afternoon would have been typical of the "Mellow Autumn." The company was quite as large as on Wednesday, and many of the occasional visitors had doubtless been attracted by the Champion Stakes, in which Minting and Friar's Balsam were to cross swords for the first time. This event was set third on the card, and from the minute that the pair of celebrities entered the birdcage until they set off for the starting point each was mobbed by a whole host of horse-worshippers. With Friar's Balsam broken somewhat in his coat he did not carry the same external polish as Minting. On the other hand, he was much fuller of muscle than when he received such rough usage in the Lancashire Plate at Manchester, and in cantering by himself down the Rowley Mile his perfect action was seen to the greatest advantage. The only fear entertained in the Minting camp was that the big horse might give way in one of his hocks, and his appearance at the post must have seriously alarmed some of the Cambridgeshire operators, seeing that he returned to as little as 100 to 8. For the task immediately before him he always represented an odds-on chance, and although 5 to 2 was the general price of Friar's Balsam, a fractional increase was here and there procurable. Tom Cannon being unable to ride the weight, George Barrett was chosen to steer Friar's Balsam, and here I may mention that the second-named jockey has received a retainer from Sir Frederick Johnstone for next season. The opponents of Minting and Friar's Balsam were Mamia, Benburb, Love-in-Idleness, and Zanzibar. Confidence in Mamia for the big handicap of Tuesday week was materially restored when her owner did not fear to run her in a race so unfavourable to her prospects of victory. Although deprived of third place by Zanzibar, it would have been a desperately near thing between the pair with both ridden out. As Mamia seems to represent Mr. Manton's filly a little below 7st for the Cambridgeshire, she ought on paper to win. To return to Minting and Friar's Balsam, they singled themselves out from the Bushes, and with the three-year-old forcing the work strongly down the hill, he got his doughty opponent in trouble at the foot of it, and won in a canter by half a length. The return to form of such a popular character as Friar's Balsam created a general feeling of satisfaction, and should all go well with him in the Winter Seabreeze and Ayrshire will have to look to their laurels in 1889. Although not actually lame Minting pulled up somewhat sore, and his enemies for the Cambridgeshire took fresh heart, as they offered 50's against him, and also laid 4 to 1 that he did not run. This opposition proved the prelude to his scratching for the big handicap of the Houghton week, for which I was fully prepared. With the Newmarket Oaks confined to Seabreeze and Bellatrix, the St. Leger heroine had apparently such a hollow task in the presentation of a stone, that a mere handful of people congregated in the vicinity of the winning post. Those who did saw an unexpected sight, as although Rickaby was driving Bellatrix hard for more than a quarter of a mile from home, Seabreeze could not get out of her way, and the head by which the extensive odds were landed would have been actually recovered in the next stride. No wonder, therefore, that Seabreeze was in a terribly distressed state afterwards. The form is altogether false, and the future will, I feel sure, demonstrate that it is so. Before dinner, Mamia was a good favourite for the Cambridgeshire, from Gallinule, and plenty of money seemed to be in the market for Bismarck, Sheen, Acmé, Sandal, and Phil, despite some single-handed opposition to Acmé. The Cesarewitch heroine, Ténébreuse, was handled somewhat roughly, and the same can be said of Trayles. To-morrow there will, inclusive of a match, be nine events, and my selections are: THE CUB, for the Challenge Whip; SHEEN, for the Newmarket Derby; BROOKLYN, for the Match; HARLOW, for the Fourth Welter; TALLY HO, for the Selling Plate; EL DORADO, for the Prendergast Stakes; CHILPERIC or EVERITT, for the Sweepstakes; D'ORSAY or TREMOLO, for the Juvenile Handicap; and SANDAL, for the Great Challenge Stakes.

April Fool settled down in front on the left, followed by Maxim, Sea Song, and Monsieur de Paris, with Shillelagh, Lal Brough, and Maiden Belle in the centre, and Sawdust wide on the right. Before reaching the bushes Lal Brough was beaten, and half-way down the hill Monsieur de Paris and Maiden Belle gave way, leaving the issue to April Fool, Sawdust, Maxim, and Shillelagh. A fine race ensued, and Maxim, catching April Fool on the post, won by a head; three lengths between second and third. Sawdust was fourth, Ondine fifth, Sea Song sixth, True Blue II. seventh, and St. Hubert last. Maxim pulled up very lame.

Mr. G. Haughton's Italian Girl, 7st 8lb .. (M. Cannon) 0

Betting—9 to 2 agst Athel Lass, 6 to 1 each agst Devonian and Philip Augustus, 8 to 1 agst Madame Galvani, 100 to 12 agst Lady Kars filly, and 10 to 1 each agst Red Duck and Avarice II.

The running was made by the Lady Kars filly, who was closely followed by Avarice II., Red Duck, and Athel Lass, with Peregrine Pickle and Philip Augustus well up, and Lord Iddesleigh and Devonian heading the others. Little alteration occurred until 300 yards from home, when Athel Lass challenged the Lady Kars filly, and getting the best of it opposite the stand won by a length; a length and a half between second and third. Lord Iddesleigh was fourth, Avarice II. fifth, Peregrine Pickle sixth, Devonian seventh, and Fortune Teller last. The winner was bought in for 380 guineas.

The CHAMPION STAKES of 30 sovs each, h ft, with 600 added; entrance 5 sovs; weight for age; mares allowed 3lb; the second received 10 per cent., and the third 5 per cent. on the whole stake. A.F. (1 mile 2 furlongs).

Sir F. Johnstone's Friar's Balsam, by Hermit—Flower of Dorset, 3 yrs, 8st 8lb .. (G. Barrett) 1
Mr. Vyner's Minting, 5 yrs, 9st .. (Webb) 2
Mr. H. Milner's Zanzibar, 3 yrs, 8st 2lb .. (E. Martin) 3

(Winner trained by Porter.)

Betting—100 to 60 on Minting, 5 to 2 agst Friar's Balsam, 100 to 8 agst Mamia, and 20 to 1 each agst Zanzibar and Love in Idleness.

Benburb showed the way from Zanzibar on the left, with Minting and Friar's Balsam in the centre, Mamia waiting at their heels. The light was so bad that very little of the race could be seen, but when the colours were distinguished, before reaching the bushes, Zanzibar had taken a slight lead of Benburb, with Minting and Friar's Balsam pulling double next, and Mamia running well just behind them. At the bushes Benburb and Zanzibar were done with, and Friar's Balsam drew out, followed by Minting, Mamia at the same time taking third place. Minting was pulling so hard that his backers were greatly flattered, but he collapsed when Webb had to ask him a question before entering the Abingdon Mile Bottom, and for the remainder of the journey was held safe by Friar's Balsam, who won easily by half a length; Zanzibar, four lengths off, was third, just in front of Mamia, who was eased fifty yards from home, and Benburb was last.

The T.Y.C. NURSERY PLATE (handicap) of 300 guineas, for two-yr-olds; winners extra; entrance 4 sovs. T.Y.C.

Mr. T. Bramall's Lady Barefoot, 6st 2lb (allowed 5lb) .. (W. Jones) 0
(Winner trained by G. Dawson.)

Dechamps was weighed for by Griffiths, but bolted on his way to the post, and throwing his jockey, never came under the starter's orders. He must not be considered a starter.

Betting—100 to 30 agst Cheroot, 7 to 1 each agst Lord George, Carnival, and L'Avare, 100 to 12 each agst Wenonah and Mackery, 10 to 1 each agst Lady Barefoot and Bay Agnes colt, and 100 to 8 agst Teviot.

Dechamps bolted on the way to the post, threw his rider, and did not take part in the race. When the signal was given Cheroot made play from Teviot and Lady Barefoot, with Wenonah, Carnival, and Mackery next, and L'Avare heading the others for a furlong, when Teviot and Lady Barefoot drew to the front, closely followed by Mackery, Carnival, and Cheroot, with Wenonah lying next. At the commencement of the rails Teviot and Lady Barefoot were in trouble, and gave way to the three placed, of whom Wenonah got the best of a good race by three-parts of a length; half a length between second and third. Cheroot was fourth, Lady Barefoot fifth, L'Avare sixth, Mackery seventh, Teviot eighth, and Bay Agnes colt last.

Betting—200 to 7 on Seabreeze.

Bellatrix made the running, and, forcing the pace, she held a clear lead to the Rowley Mile starting post, when Robinson drove Seabreeze up to her, but although the favourite drew out a length, Bellatrix struggled on gamely, and, answering the desperate calls of Rickaby, she only failed amidst great excitement by a head.

Betting—2 to 1 on Paget, 6 to 1 agst New York, and 8 to 1 agst Spoliation.

Paget waited on Spoliation and New York until two hundred yards from home, and then drew to the front and won easily by three parts of a length; half a length between second and third. Jolly Bachelor was last. The winner was sold to Captain Machell for 300 guineas.

SALE AT NEWMARKET.—The attendance in the Park Paddocks yesterday morning was a satisfactory one, and, although the number of sales effected was small, fair prices were realised. In the catalogue a draft of horses in training from Chetwynd House figured prominently, and it was by no means the first time Mr. Benzon's lot were sent into the sale ring. On this occasion five of the animals went to the bid of Mr. James Hopper, but presumably they were bought in. Castor, however, was sold to Mr. E. Bird for 300 guineas, and Carrasco—who cost his late owner a very big sum prior to the St. Leger of last year—now passed into the possession of Mr. Truman for 350 guineas.

AUSTRALIAN CRICKETERS.—To-day the sixth team of cricketers from Australia take their departure from London, on their return home. They are timed to leave Fenchurch-street, by special train, at 11.30 a.m., for Tilbury, and will then embark on the Orient Liner Cuzco, which sails at one o'clock. Bonnor remains in England.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY FOOTBALL CLUB.—At a meeting of the Association Club, last evening, Mr. F. G. J. Ford, King's, was elected captain of the C.U.A.F.C. for the ensuing season. The office of secretary will be filled up at a meeting to be held next Monday.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN ROUMANIA.—The Heir Apparent, during his short stay in the capital of the country which rejoices in "Carmen Sylva" as its Queen, cannot fail to be struck with the remarkable complexions and splendid complexions of the Roumanian ladies. The secret of their soft skins, with a bewitching rose flush that presents a striking contrast to the cutaneous roughness which characterises most of the female dwellers on the banks of the Danube, is traceable to the fact that no European nation is such a persistent user of Rowland's Kalydor, which is a sure preventive of freckles, chaps, redness, roughness of the skin, and all the incidental skin eruptions common to a variable climate. Ask anywhere for Rowland's Kalydor, in 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. bottles.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

MR. BALFOUR AND MR. MORLEY.—In a letter to a correspondent the Chief Secretary for Ireland controverts a statement recently made by Mr. John Morley to the effect that in a certain district the country people assembled to bring in turf and potatoes for the families of men who had been sent to prison for refusing to supply goods, and that they had a peaceable procession, and offered no sign or shadow of disturbance; "but the authorities thought fit to declare this clearly lawful procession an illegal meeting, and ten persons received six weeks' imprisonment, with hard labour." Mr. Balfour now points out that this case occurred at Miltown Malbay, where boycotting of a peculiarly virulent type prevailed at the time. A portion of the crowd forming the procession broke in upon the police, who had to draw their revolvers in order to protect themselves. It was for taking part in this disorderly conduct that ten men were prosecuted, and not for taking part in the demonstration, as Mr. Morley wrongly supposed. Mr. Morley, again, was inaccurate in saying that these "ten persons received six weeks' imprisonment, with hard labour." The magistrates, in the first place, dismissed the case against five out of the ten. True, they convicted the other five, and sentenced them to terms of imprisonment varying from two months to six weeks each. But these five men appealed, and the County Court Judge at Ennis, when hearing the appeal, considered there was not sufficient evidence to inculpate four out of the five. He, therefore, reversed the convictions in their case. In the case of the fifth man, the judge decided that there was evidence of unlawful assembly, and confirmed the conviction. But even this man, the last of the ten, he allowed to go free under a recognisance to come up for judgment when called upon. As a matter of fact, not one of the ten men ever underwent one hour's imprisonment. Mr. Morley could hardly, indeed, have unearthed a happier illustration of the absence of all injustice in the administration of the Crimes Act.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION HOUSE.—ALLEGED FORGERIES BY A BUILDER.—Richard Elford, a builder, Star-street, Edgware-road, was charged on remand with having forged and uttered two cheques for £255 and £350, with intent to defraud.—Mr. Mullens prosecuted for the London Bankers' Protection Association.—Elford was committed for trial.

CLERKENWELL.—THE CHURCH BURGLARS.—George Jones and Samuel Williams were committed for trial, accused of breaking into St. Aloysius Church and stealing therein two silver cruets, the property of the Rev. Father Ryan, on the 28th ult. Evidence had previously been given as to Father Ryan's struggle in the church with the prisoners and as to the identification of Williams by persons who had seen him outside the building.

THAMES.—BRUTAL ASSAULT ON A CONSTABLE.—Michael Sullivan, 23, and Michael Murphy, 26, were charged on remand with violently assaulting Constable Bishop, 160 H, while in the execution of his duty.—Mr. Lushington characterised the assault as one of a most brutal character, and sentenced each prisoner to six months' hard labour.

STRATFORD PETTY SESSIONS.—ATTEMPT TO POISON A FAMILY.—Frederick Bass, 35, gilder, of 5, Charles-terrace, Higham-hill, Walthamstow, was charged, on his own confession, with attempting to poison his wife, Emma, and his three children (Ada Emily, aged ten, Harry William, aged nine, and William Frederick John, aged four), by administering a quantity of oxalic acid, on the 10th inst.—The magistrates were Mr. Eliot Howard (in the chair) and Mr. E. R. Cook.—Inspector Hudson, of Walthamstow, stated that at a quarter to ten o'clock on Wednesday morning prisoner went to the Walthamstow Police-station, and said, "I have been and done a very foolish thing, and have tried to poison my wife and children. I have given them some of this," and he gave up a packet marked, "Oxalic Acid—Poison." He went on, "I put it in their tea, this morning. Oh, my poor head. It has been bad for a month. My wife drank some of it, and was sick. I don't think the children drank any." Witness detained him, and sent for Dr. Lake, the divisional surgeon, to go to the address given, and went there, and saw the wife and children. They appeared all right. The wife said, "There are a few tea-leaves in the sink," but they were washed clean.—Dr. Wellington Lake, the divisional surgeon, deposed that on his arrival at the house he found that all the tea things had been washed clean. There had evidently been oxalic acid in the tea from the taste the wife said it had. At the station the accused seemed to be very stupid, apparently not in his right mind.—Emma Bass, the wife of the prisoner, deposed that on Wednesday morning she made the tea and poured out a cup. Her husband went from the table, and said he would be back in a few minutes. She sipped the tea, but not liking the taste, spat it out, and washed her mouth five or six times.—Mr. Eliot Howard: What did you do with the rest of the tea?—Witness: My husband threw it into the sink, and my daughter said to him, "I should think you have been trying to poison mother"; and I, never having a thought of such a thing, told her I should smack her head. He asked me then if I had drunk any of the tea, and I told him I had, but had spat it out. He then told me I had better throw the rest of the cupful down the sink, and I did. I asked him to taste the tea, but he would not.—Mr. E. R. Cook: Had he a chance of getting at the tea after you made it?—Witness: Yes; but I didn't see him put anything in it. I went into the other room and he must have done it then.—Mr. E. R. Cook: Did the children taste it?—Witness: No; but they washed their mouths at the sink ever so many times.—Mr. Eliot Howard (to the prisoner): Have you any questions to ask your wife?—Prisoner: She is the cause of it all.—Mr. Eliot Howard: Never mind that now. Have you any questions to ask?—Prisoner: No; it's true she went into the front room and I put half of the oxalic acid into the tea.—Mr. E. R. Cook (to witness): Has he been drinking lately?—Witness: I am mostly in bed at night when he comes home, but I know he had a little last Saturday.—Mr. E. R. Cook: Has he complained of his head?—Witness: Yes, and he has seemed rather funny this last six weeks.—Mr. Eliot Howard: It is quite evident that this case must be remanded for the prisoner to be examined by the doctors at the House of Detention. We will remand at this stage.

BREACH OF PROMISE.

At Brighton, yesterday, an under-sheriff's jury was empanelled to assess damages in an action brought by Fanny Perrett, a domestic servant, of Brighton, against Thomas Milne Ross, corporal in the Scots Greys, for breach of promise of marriage. Mr. Haycraft, barrister, appeared for the plaintiff; the defendant was not represented.

Mr. Haycraft, in opening the case, said the promise of marriage was not in dispute, because the defendant, although he appeared when the writ was issued, and when the claim of £500 was made against him, entered no defence. The acquaintance began on Sept. 18, 1887, plaintiff at that time being house and parlour maid in a house in Upper Rock-gardens, at Brighton, and the defendant was a corporal in the Scots Greys, then stationed at Brighton. It was said that his father was a medical man in Scotland, and that he bore a good character in his regiment, having fair chances of promotion. Plaintiff met the defendant casually, and an intimacy sprang up between them which went on from Sept. 18 to Dec. 4, when he asked the plaintiff to be his wife, and she consented. On the same day he seduced her after the promise of marriage. The learned counsel read a number of letters from the defendant, amongst which was the following:

"F Troop, Royal Scots Greys, Preston Barracks, Brighton.—3, 1, '88.—My Dearest Fan—I am just going to fulfil my promise to you, my dearest. I could not write yesterday, as I could not find time until it was too late to catch the post. But this is the last time I will ever disappoint you. Last night I did not enjoy myself at all, just because I saw all the rest of the fellows enjoying themselves with their lady-loves, and me no one to talk to at all. I was very glad when young Jones came up, as he was very good company, dearest, but not so good as you by far, my own darling pet. To-day has been another day of hard work, as we have taken down all the decorations we put up. We were told by the colonel that our troop was the best decorated in the regiment. I had such a fearful dream last night. I dreamt that someone had taken your photo out of the frame, and when I was looking for it I thought I met you all bathed in blood, and you know not how I was, dearest. I expect you will be very lonely in your new situation, but I hope you will be comfortable, dearest. I have felt very lonely ever since I last saw you, darling. I have no more news at present, so good-bye, and many, many kisses to my own and only darling pet for ever and ever.—Believe I remain your true love until death, THOMAS M. ROSS."

After defendant had left Brighton with his regiment his letters became less affectionate, and so the plaintiff reminded him of her condition, and asked that the marriage might not be put off too long. He wrote in reply that he was very sorry he could not marry her, and that if he promised to do so he must have been drunk at the time.

The plaintiff, a young woman of prepossessing appearance, was then called, and bore out the opening statement of her counsel. She said the child was born on Aug. 19, and when the defendant saw the baby he expressed himself pleased with him, and said he should make a soldier of him when he grew up.

The jury assessed the damages at £300.

KICKING A MOTHER TO DEATH.—Early yesterday morning a terrible murder was committed at the quiet village of Sherburn, ten miles from Leeds, the victim being Mrs. Catherine Mountain, a widow, aged seventy, who kept a small public-house, called the Travellers' Rest. The murderer was her only son George, who had of late been drinking heavily. Just before closing time on the previous night Mountain went into the tap-room, where his mother and the servant were sitting, and as soon as the people were turned out he locked the door and put the bar across the windows. He would not let either of the two women go to bed, and at half-past eleven he commenced to kick his mother with brutal violence, continuing the assault up to four o'clock in the morning. During this terrible scene the servant was a horrified spectator in a corner of the room, as prisoner threatened that after he had kicked his mother to death he would do the same to her. He pulled everything in shape of clothing off his unfortunate mother, and battered her body beyond recognition. A part of the remains was thrown upon the fire. After Mountain had fallen asleep the servant raised an alarm, and the murderer was arrested. He was brought before the magistrates during the day, and remanded for a week. He presented a wild appearance, and in reference to the charge said he did not know what he was doing, as he thought it was some one who had come to rob the house.

THE ARMADA.—The unanimous praise bestowed upon this historical drama and grand spectacle by the leading press of the country is nightly endorsed by the crowded audiences which fill Drury-lane Theatre at each performance.

THE ARMADA.—It is impossible in an advertisement to give an idea of the volumes that have been written enthusiastically commending this play to the attention of the lovers of the artistic, the beautiful, and the true.

THE ARMADA.—Times says: "A great success was achieved, and the fame of the theatre as the home of spectacular displays cannot fail to be increased by this latest addition to their number. Nor does the production lack merit in other directions. The authors of 'The Armada,' inspired by the thought which the tercentenary of the great naval conflict suggests, have set themselves to write a play which shall be fresh and interesting, and shall not depend exclusively for success upon mere scenic effect. The times and events which they have chosen for reproduction on the stage are among the most stirring in the whole annals of British history; they supply abundant opportunities for appealing to the patriotic sentiment, and they bristle with romantic and picturesque incident."

THE ARMADA.—Times says: "The great naval display, which can be called no less than a triumph of stage artifice, was received on Saturday with shouts of applause, and if it stood alone would be sufficient to attract the public for many a day. At the fall of the curtain there was loud and prolonged applause."

THE ARMADA.—Daily Telegraph says: "In a scene of general excitement, Mr. Augustus Harris on Saturday night succeeded in launching one of the mightiest, most showy, and costly vessels that has ever been built in the dramatic docks of Drury-lane. The sea-fight between the Armada and the English war-vessels off Calais may be pronounced the most effective historical picture ever realised on the modern stage. The murky gloom of the atmosphere, the lurid light thrown on the opposing vessels, the awful fusillade of firing, the shouting and cheering of the sailors, the marvellous moving of the vessels to give the enemy a broadside, make up a scene so novel and impressive that it will not readily be forgotten. This Armada fight, in its design, its daring, and its execution, will be quoted as one of the boldest achievements ever attempted on the Drury-lane stage. This scene alone will attract all London."

THE ARMADA.—Daily Telegraph says: "In his pictures of the Inquisition Mr. Harris has been careful not to give offence. All was done in scrupulous good taste. In the [illegible] a triumph of stage management and a brilliant flash of colour. It is a scene that will linger on the memory. Queen Elizabeth has to pass, under a baldachino, to Old St. Paul's, to make thanksgiving for the safety of her country. [illegible] and those who would understand what Elizabeth's reign was like so far as it outwardly appeared can see it here. The old cathedral dedicated to St. Paul, the Cross, and the [illegible] appear here just as they were three centuries ago. This will be a picture that will be appreciated alike by the student and the sightseer. 'The Armada' is one of the most distinctly creditable things that Mr. Harris has ever done. 'The Armada' is a noteworthy advance on anything that has been recently attempted in giving artistic and thoughtful work to a popular stage. Such enterprises must succeed."

THE ARMADA.—Standard says: "Mr. Augustus Harris has chosen for the date of his new play a remarkably picturesque and stirring period of English history. . . . An extraordinarily effective series of stage pictures has been supplied. The great sea fight between the Armada and the English fleet created much excitement and astonishment. The brilliant procession to St. Paul's, whither Elizabeth goes in great state and triumph to return thanks for victory over the enemy, is among the most imposing and effective of the many wonderful scenes which have made Mr. Harris's management famous."

THE ARMADA.—Daily News says: "The authors of 'The Armada' have drunk deep of the sentiment of the most stirring and the most truly national episode of our annals. The story [illegible] interested and amused the spectators. The dialogue is [illegible] good. The great battle off Calais is the most striking feature and the scenic climax of the play. [illegible]"

THE ARMADA.—Morning Post says: "In 'The Armada' Messrs. Henry Hamilton and Augustus Harris have hit upon a happy idea that will bring substantial reward to them, and will at the same time supply for months to come a great deal of enjoyment for the playgoing public. [illegible]"

THE ARMADA.—Morning Post says: "It is the fight off Calais that most excites the audience. [illegible]"

THE ARMADA.—Chronicle says: "A healthful and invigorating breeze of patriotic sentiment surges through the new drama produced with unmistakable success on Saturday evening; [illegible]"

THE ARMADA.—Chronicle says: "The spectacular effects were of the remarkable [illegible]"

THE ARMADA.—Chronicle says: "In its scenic [illegible]"

THE ARMADA.—Chronicle says: "The play ends with a gorgeous procession of the Queen to Old St. Paul's to return thanks for the national victory. [illegible]"

J. L. ROECKEL'S NEW SONG. Words by F. E. WEATHERLY.

WHO WAS IT? Sung by Madame Paget, Madame Winn, Madame Raymond, Miss Ethel Winn, &c.

The flowers were bright, the fields were gay,
The birds were singing to each other;
Who kept me stitching, stitch all day?
My anxious mother.
Who found me looking glum and gray,
And had with her a quarrel—rather?
Who took me off, and went away?
My loving father.

Who was it leapt across the stile
And asked me softly where was mother?
Who was it wanted me to smile—just to smile?
'Twas not my brother.
Who was it stayed till eventide?
Who led me home among the clover?
Who whispered, "Darling, you are mine"?
My own true lover.

Who was it saw us going back,
And pried and watched us from their stations?
Who was it painted us so black—so very black?
My fond relations!
Who does not trouble what they say,
Or if they ring it from the steeple?
Who means to do the same next day?
Your humble servant, gentle people.

THE WHITE DRAWING ROOM.—A Gentleman writes: "Whatever I do I do thoroughly. I determined to renovate everything in my drawing room with 'Aspinall's White Enamel,' so I had all the furniture and woodwork well pumice-stoned, then painted one coat. When that was hard I had it again pumice-stoned, then another coat of 'Aspinall,' and when that was hard I repeated the pumice-stoning process, and put on a third coat of 'Aspinall,' and the effect is beautiful beyond description; a perfectly hard marble surface, white as snow, and smooth as glass." LONDON, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 12.

Yesterday the Emperor William arrived at Rome, and met with a most enthusiastic reception. At the Palace, Kaiser Wilhelm, King Humbert, and Queen Margherita appeared together on the balcony, surrounded by distinguished personages. The cheering was tremendous, and the general effect was enhanced by the crowd suddenly displaying little flags of the German and Italian colours and waving them about frantically. The German Emperor visits the Vatican to-day, and will have a private interview with the Pope.

On Wednesday evening a terrible railway accident, attended with great loss of life, occurred in the United States, on the Lehigh Valley Railway. The victims formed part of a Roman Catholic excursion-party, and were chiefly women and children.

Lord Herschell, presiding at a meeting of the Organising Committee of the Imperial Institute, yesterday, reported that, as the result of a conference with the principal Chambers of Commerce and technical associations of the kingdom, it had been ascertained that there was a general consensus of opinion among these bodies in favour of the establishment of a Department of Commercial Intelligence. The report was unanimously approved.

In connection with the October exhibition of hardy fruit at the Crystal Palace, a meeting of the members of the British Fruit Growers' Association was held yesterday, at which Mr. Tallerman delivered an address, showing the difficulties our home-growers experience in competing with foreign importations.

Yesterday, the City Coroner concluded the inquest touching the death of Catherine Eddowes, who was found murdered and mutilated in Mitre-square, on Sunday morning, the 30th ult. Two witnesses stated that at half-past one in the morning—within a quarter of an hour of the murder—they saw a woman, whom they believed to be the deceased, talking with a man. They gave a partial description of him. A constable of the Metropolitan Police deposed to finding in Goulston-street a portion of an apron corresponding with the fragment of the same garment found upon the body. Upon a wall close by were written in chalk the words, "The Jews are the men that will not be blamed for nothing." Detective-officer Halse, of the City Police, said he saw the writing on the wall, and instructions were given to have it photographed; but before that could be done an order was given by the Metropolitan police—this being on their ground—that it should be rubbed out, lest it should cause an outbreak against the Jews. He protested, but it was rubbed out notwithstanding. Finally, the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against some person unknown.

At a meeting of the Middlesex magistrates yesterday the consideration of the application for the renewal of the music licence for Alexandra Park, which was adjourned in order that the justices might consider whether the recent parachute exhibitions came within the scope of a resolution prohibiting dangerous performances, was resumed. Mr. Baldwin, the aeronaut, was examined, and stated that he considered it much safer to descend by means of a parachute than in a balloon. By an overwhelming majority it was decided to renew the licence.

On the same occasion the music licence for Olympia was refused, many of the inhabitants having complained that they suffered grievous annoyance from the shrieks of women on the toboggan slide or the switchback railway and from the noise of brass-band contests and mimic sieges at the Irish Exhibition.

In spite of a further influx of £320,000 in gold from the Continent, the Stock Markets lost a little of their early buoyancy on the Bank return. Foreign Government bonds were supported by higher Berlin prices, while home railways were finally irregular. American and Canadian lines gave way, and Mexican (Vera Cruz) were heavy, on adverse rumours. Copper and diamond shares were in request, at an advance. Consols improved.

M. CLÉMENCEAU, who is certainly one of the ablest Radicals in France, has expressed his intention of supporting M. FLOQUET in his idea of revision, limited. This device for counteracting the BOULANGER programme has its attractions, but is full of peril. M. FLOQUET is an advanced Republican, and if he took his stand on the Constitution he would be denounced as no better than an Orleanist or Bonapartist. French Radicalism cannot understand any Conservatism—not even the maintenance of the most Democratic institutions. The hope, therefore, of M. FLOQUET is that he will appease the appetite for change by declaring for a moderate and measured revision of the Constitution, including a reform, not an abolition, of the Senate, and, perhaps, the restoration of the election by arrondissement. This latter reversion is prompted by the fear that, with departmental elections as at present, General BOULANGER would head so many successful "lists" that his influence would be immensely increased. M. FLOQUET cherishes another hope. He believes that if the Senate and Chamber expressly restrict the scope of the deliberations to take place in the National Assembly that body can be kept within the lines laid down for it beforehand. In 1879 the Assembly confined itself to the abrogation of Article 9 of the Constitution of February, 1875, which fixed Versailles as the seat of the executive power and the meeting-place of the two Chambers. It does not follow, however, that the self-control of nine years ago may be repeated to-day. The Constitution places no limit to the powers of the National Assembly once met. It may revise the fundamental institutions of France "entirely or in part." It may turn the Republic into a Socialist State ruled by a Convention, or call in the Comte DE PARIS to occupy a revived throne. At the present time France is perturbed by lawless ambitions. General BOULANGER is used as a stalking-horse by Communards, Bonapartists, and Royalists. There is no proposal, however wild, no motion, however bold, that may not be made in the National Assembly if the Senate and the Chamber once agree to unite in that form of Congress. We must remember also that the meeting of the revisers will take place, not at Versailles as in 1879, but in Paris itself. They will be from the first under shadow of the fear of that reckless population which has so often dissolved Parliaments and flung Governments into the gutter. There is this additional danger, that many French Conservatives would welcome a revolution, believing that out of anarchy monarchy may arise. France, it is thought, must go through the furnace again before it can be stamped anew with the Royal image and superscription.

In the presence of such dangers it is not surprising that many thorough Republicans disbelieve in the necessity for Revision. They argue, plausibly enough, that if M. FLOQUET proposes any radical change he will alienate all moderate Republicans, while the Clericals and Conservatives will oppose his projects, simply because they emanate from himself. Then, if he brings forward a timid and limited reform, he will find himself denounced by General BOULANGER and the Irreconcilable Radicals backed for the nonce by all the Royalists. It is easy to conceive an Administration that would compel the support of all the reasonable Republicans and all the patriotic Conservatives of France. President CARNOT more or less embodies this wise and respectable species of Government; but M. FLOQUET does not. He acquired notoriety by violence; his alliances are with the Radical sections; he is opposed to the Church; and the holders of property distrust him. It is not very likely that he can rally around him a force sufficient to destroy the Boulangism of the hour. For the General represents not only personal ambition but political discontent. His camp is a Cave of Adullam, and all who for one reason or another detest the Republic accept his programme for the time. He simply cries aloud for "Dissolution and Revision!" and without formally surrendering their principles Revolutionists join with Conservatives in swelling the demand. The Communards believe that when the General has broken down the legal barriers they can rush in and revive the Commune. The Bonapartists and Royalists hope to turn him into a voluntary or involuntary General MONK. Meanwhile M. BOULANGER and the adventurers who surround and support him think they can make tools of all parties, and when needful throw them aside. That it must be recalled was the idea of the Republican statesmen, including M. CLÉMENCEAU himself, who forced General BOULANGER upon successive Cabinets. They then hoped to utilise for their own purposes his personal popularity with the Army and in the provinces. Now they find that he was all the time working for himself. France can hardly have any great confidence in politicians who confess themselves to have been formerly the dupes of an adventurer. The greatest cause of distrust, however, exists in the rival programme of M. CLÉMENCEAU. He goes far in the direction of a vague and mischievous Socialism when he demands that more taxes should be taken off the poor and imposed on the rich, and when he suggests that functionaries should be dismissed because they are "Clerical" in their views. This declaration of war against property and Conservatism is not likely to make fundholders, landowners, and moderate men less likely to accept the aid of any man who promises to upset the Radicalism of France. On whom, then, will M. CLÉMENCEAU and M. FLOQUET rely? They are not revolutionary enough for M. ROCHEFORT and his Irreconcilables. They are not moderate enough for the Opportunists. They proclaim war against "the rich" and against the Church, so must expect Conservative and clerical hostility. The chances, therefore, are that shortly after the Chambers meet M. FLOQUET will fall from power unlamented. Then France, if she disdain adventures and adventurers, may find in a Moderate Ministry one stage between herself and the abyss of internal disorder into which Boulangism will plunge the country. President CARNOT, by selecting a new and capable Republican Premier—moderate and respectable, like himself—and by appealing to the nation direct, may save France from another Revolution on the centenary of the first.

If it is difficult to forecast the final settling down of these seething elements in the interior of France, it is easy to perceive that while the nation is distracted at home she must be powerless abroad. It would, in any case, be difficult for a European Sovereign to ally himself with a Republic ruled by Ministers whose tenure of office averages ten months; but the difficulty is greatly increased when men like M. FLOQUET and M. CLÉMENCEAU represent the old ideas of the Revolution. France under such men is, therefore, condemned to inactivity. We are told by her statisticians that there is another cause for her decline and fall. Her population recedes, and in these days of great armies nations to be warlike must have men. The cradle must feed the conscription. It is calculated that in twenty or thirty years France will have so diminished in numbers that she will be only a second-class Power like Spain. We cannot, however, see that this is entirely to be regretted from any point of view. When France was a great State, surrounded by small German or Italian nationalities, she played the bully on all sides—alike under LOUIS XIV., the First Republic, and the BONAPARTES. It would be for her own advantage if loss of military power compelled her to abandon that offensive rôle. The wit of her writers, the ardour of her men of science and research, the genius of her artists, the talent and taste of her artisans, the industry and ingenuity of her sons in every calling would still make France a foremost nation if only twenty millions of people looked to Paris as their metropolis. She must influence art and literature and thought while her language lives, and there is no danger that it will ever die out. No German "pickelhaubes" can keep out her ideas—no Triple League can arrest the victories of her artists. But she must never again expect to march through Europe trampling down the aspirations and hopes of other nations. Strong at home, behind rampart after rampart she may defy invasions of which nobody dreams; but it is difficult to conceive any combination of circumstances that could give her a chance of retrieving the position she lost, probably for ever, in 1870 and 1871. Her people feel and know this truth. The sufferings of that period have not passed from their memories; if it were so they would find plentiful reminders in the calls of the tax-gatherer. No country in the world is so heavily burthened as France at this day, and her debt increases year by year. The United States seventeen years after the close of their civil war had reduced their liabilities more than one-half; France since 1871 has added more than a half to her already enormous indebtedness of that time. The Empire was considered reckless in its expenditure; the Republic is absolutely profligate in its flinging away of money and in its piling up of new debt. All these things make for peace. Distracted by factions, without an ally in the world, with an increasing debt and a decreasing population, France is bound over in heavy bail to keep the peace; and, however painful the causes, nobody can regret the result.

DR. VILLIERS STANFORD, Cambridge Professor of Music, has recently contributed to one of the monthly magazines a eulogistic article upon Dr. HUBERT PARRY's Birmingham oratorio, "Judith; or, the Regeneration of Manasseh." There have been many such from various pens, though none, perhaps, so indiscriminate in admiration as Dr. STANFORD's, which effort, however, is saved from the charge of "wasteful and ridiculous excess" by showing how one composer can praise another, and to what extent a sentiment of fraternity sometimes goes among those who are popularly imagined to be a jealous and quarrelsome class of men. Our present concern is not so much with the Cambridge Professor's laudation of Dr. PARRY—a good deal of which we cordially endorse—as with some remarks upon criticism therewith connected. Even as BILL NYE "went for" that heathen Chinee, Dr. STANFORD has gone for the critics, with fearsome intent to smash, pulverise, and destroy, as far as in him lies. It may be that some people, noting the virulence of his attack, have found an easy method of accounting for it. They have bethought them, perhaps, that the writer of the magazine article has sometimes engaged the attention of those whom, in contradistinction, we suppose, to amateur critics like himself, he calls "professional critics," and that the result could hardly have been agreeable. They have remembered that, when Dr. STANFORD was younger and more rash than now, he came a few terrific "croppers," the critics doing nothing to prevent them, and that the history of his two operas, upon which the "professionals" bestowed much notice, after their manner, is not a proud one to look back upon. We grant that this is a natural way of explaining the Professor's ire, for even "celestial minds" can be touchy and resentful. Nevertheless, we put it from us, as much more natural than correct. It would be a poor compliment to Dr. STANFORD, who arrived long ago at years of discretion, to suppose for a moment that, under cover of a defence of Dr. PARRY, he has assailed the critics on his own account, pouring forth the accumulated anger of years while ostensibly interested for another. No; that plainly cannot be. Some readers may ask, But why did he lay himself open to such an easy and detrimental conclusion? Our answer is that those whose motives are most innocent of guile often the most readily put themselves in compromising positions. They credit the world with a perception as accurate as their own honesty is transparent, and sometimes suffer for being so simple. As far as we are concerned, Dr. STANFORD shall not suffer in the present premises. He has, of course, run amok among the critics, like a musical Malay, under the inspiration of zealous friendship. Affecting spectacle! The devotion of the Cambridge PYLADES to the ORESTES of the Royal College of Music must touch all properly-constituted minds.

The extent of the feeling just referred to can only be measured by the nature of the action to which it has led. Some test of it is, however, supplied by the mere fact that Dr. STANFORD has put on his harness and taken the field against what Dean SWIFT called "the malignant deity, Criticism." How many gallant knights have gone forth on the same errand, resolved to track the monster to his malodorous den, and there incontinently make an end of him! Alas! what has come of it all? The critics, who, if they were reasonable men, would consider themselves annihilated, are more numerous and, as Dr. STANFORD would probably say, more stupid and malicious than ever! Does the Cambridge Professor expect to succeed in putting an end to what he calls "ordinary criticism"? He is an eminent man, but, even if we credit him with full knowledge of that fact, he cannot, in his cool moments, have any such anticipation, and we are driven to conclude that friendly feeling has made him Quixotic. The matter becomes more inexplicable when we examine the charges he brings against Dr. PARRY's censors ante-"Judith." We are sorry to say it in connection with the working of a noble impulse, but the Professor scarcely fights fair. He makes passes which are not allowed between generous combatants. Here is an example: "The principal portion of the musical press in England, instead of seeking for merit, more often hunts for faults, and not infrequently manufactures them for the pleasure of descanting on the dark side of the picture." As to the principle underlying this statement we entirely agree, believing with M'CULLOCH that "the critic who is discerning in nothing but faults may care little to be told that this is the mark of unamiable dispositions or bad passions, but he might not feel equally easy were he convinced that he thus gives the most absolute proofs of ignorance and want of taste." The present question, however, is not one of principle, but of fact, and Dr. STANFORD, in assailing what he takes to be malignancy and dishonesty, has laid himself open to some awkward thrusts. Thus, he may be requested to explain how he knows that musical critics delight in finding fault rather than in awarding praise, and especially what authority he has for the rather grave statement that they deliberately manufacture demerits in order to injure composers by "descanting on the dark side of the picture." Either the Professor has proof of this—if so, he does not bring it forward—or he has used words without understanding their meaning, or he is guilty of the very fault which, according to him, the critics are "not infrequently" committing. This is Quixotic indeed! The worthy Knight of La Mancha was not in worse case among the windmills, because, if the Professor has no proof, he impales himself upon one or other horn of the dilemma which remains. Resolutely declining to believe that Dr. STANFORD came to the conclusions above expressed after comparing the critics' estimate of his own works with the opinions held by himself upon the same subject, we can only regret that excess of friendly sympathy impelled him beyond the bounds of prudence, not to say decorum.

Professor STANFORD goes on to state further facts, as, in his blind zeal, he believes them to be. Here is another indiscreet utterance: "Any writer who is bold enough to take a higher flight than the royalty ballad and the comic opera finds that an utter lack of appreciation, to use the mildest term, is the only recompense of his laudable endeavour, and, unless he be strong-minded enough to rate criticism at its proper value, discouragement and failure are the result." Dr. STANFORD is right with regard to certain cases, and we are happy to think so. Many composers have aimed above the ballad and comic opera, and the critics have been down upon them with results eminently conducive to the peace and welfare of the art. Dr. STANFORD will remember that the crow which decked itself out in peacock's feathers aimed above its proper ornithological rank, and was well plucked for its pains. There is such a thing as impudent presumption among bipeds without feathers. The Professor, however, if by "any writer" he mean "every writer," is so wide of the fact that the judicious must once more grieve over his impulsiveness. Granted that he himself has been roughly handled, and that Dr. PARRY has also passed through the fire of criticism—to the benefit of both, as we now see—does not Dr. STANFORD know that when Sir ARTHUR SULLIVAN began his career and, in the "Tempest" music, showed what he could do, he met with instant appreciation? Has he failed to note the impetus given to the rise of Dr. MACKENZIE by the cordial, though discriminating, applause of the critics? And, when penning the remark above quoted, did he give no thought to Mr. HAMISH M'CUNN, who certainly writes neither royalty ballads nor comic operas, yet who, coming out of obscurity but yesterday, is now, thanks to appreciative criticism, some way up the ladder of fame? Much may be allowed to a man when he unselfishly advocates the cause of another; but a line must be drawn somewhere, and should be drawn so as to exclude assertions that cannot be proved and statements that are inaccurate. It is pleasant to see that Dr. STANFORD does not content himself with accusations. We wonder that he takes any trouble with the degraded people whose wickedness he has exposed, but he is good enough to hold out to them the example of SCHUMANN, that keen discerner of incipient merit. SCHUMANN, however, was an impulsive person, like the Cambridge Professor, though not quite in the same direction; and sometimes made egregious mistakes. He once wrote enthusiastically of a man in whose works he discerned "inspiration and high ambition," more "tremendous" than anything he ever saw, and this was his opinion of one whose very name remained almost unknown until it appeared the other day in a printed letter. By way of conclusion we have only to suggest that, while musical criticism is fair game, he gets nothing for his pains who, whether moved by chivalry or selfishness, assails it in Dr. STANFORD's spirit. The public will not readily believe that the critics are worse than other men, or that, though their qualifications may vary, they strive less than other men to discharge their difficult duties in an honest and straightforward manner. We cannot congratulate Dr. PARRY upon the discretion of his well-meaning advocate, especially at a time when the new works produced by both of them, being deserving of praise, find no difficulty in obtaining their due.

As the law—and a highly-unsatisfactory law it is—stands at present, the parent who unmercifully beats a child is liable to fine or imprisonment. Usually, the punishment inflicted in such cases is not nearly so severe as it properly should be; but, at all events, there is some slight satisfaction in knowing that barbarous fathers and mothers can to a certain extent be brought to book, and made to pay, in purse or person, for their maltreatment of their offspring. Nor, again, should it be forgotten that, if a child die in consequence of a long course of savage ill-usage, the parents or the guardians of the poor little creature thus done to death will be liable to prosecution for murder, or, at least, for manslaughter. What, however, as the law stands, is the penalty to which parents are liable who systematically neglect to give their children adequate food and raiment, to say nothing of medical aid when their little ones are sick? There is a vague and indefinite idea prevalent that if a child be half-starved or imperfectly clad, or brutally neglected in any way, the neglect, although no absolute physical violence has been resorted to, constitutes a legal offence, and renders the child's parent or protector liable to criminal proceedings; but, whether this notion be based on common law or statute law, it certainly would not appear to be magisterial law as expounded by the experienced stipendiary at the Thames Police-court. On Wednesday, JOHN TOBIN, aged twenty-seven, a painter, and ELIZABETH, his wife, of the same age, both living in Hale-street, Poplar, were brought up on remand, charged with wilfully neglecting to provide sufficient food, clothing, and medical assistance for their child DANIEL, aged two and a half years, whereby his health was seriously injured. The relieving officer to the Poplar Union deposed that on Saturday evening last he went to the prisoners' dwelling; and on going up to the room which they occupied he found the little child DANIEL lying by himself on an iron bedstead, with a little shirt for all raiment. The ill odour was unbearable, and the room, in which no atom of food was found, was in an indescribably filthy condition. A medical man was at once fetched, and he reported that the child, who was too weak either to speak or even to utter a feeble wail of distress, was in a miserably emaciated condition. This was no doubt a squalidly prosaic story enough, one wretchedly common, in the short and simple annals of the poor; but somewhat of a dramatic interest was imparted to the transaction by the circumstance that as the relieving officer was leaving the house he saw the father of the poor little half-starved, emaciated, exhausted bantling coming down the street in a drunken condition. The young DANIEL was all but naked and had scarcely received enough nourishment to keep body and soul together; but his jovial sire had had a good skinful of beer or gin, and had possibly not long ago been lyrically congratulated by his born companions on being a "jolly good fellow."

It was not until Monday morning that this mournful little DANIEL was rescued from the lions' den and removed to the workhouse infirmary; but it is to be hoped that during the intervening Sabbath some attempt was made to feed the suffering child. When his father and mother were brought up to the police-court their landlady said that they paid three shillings a week for the room which they had occupied for nearly two years. Altogether they had five children. Did the whole family of seven, we wonder, wallow in the same pigsty with its one iron bedstead, its unbearable smells, and its unutterably filthy surroundings? The man TOBIN, she went on to say, was hardworking, "but generally got drunk on Saturdays." On Friday afternoon, the eve of pay day, the woman TOBIN was naturally penniless, and borrowed a shilling to buy food for her hungry brats. Doubtless she encountered some object of interest during her absence, for she did not return until nearly midnight, and meanwhile the children had nothing to eat. In the course of Saturday afternoon four of the children were sent for, and the little thirty-months-old child DANIEL was left alone in his glory on the iron bedstead, with an empty belly and nothing but a little ragged shirt to cover his living-skeleton frame. The greater part of the time, added the landlady, the children had no food to eat. The good-natured woman had often given the little ones some victuals from her own store; but what was to be done with a family the head of which "generally got drunk on Saturdays," while the mother habitually neglected them? Even the neighbours were horrified at the state in which the children were left, and had thrown food to them through the window. The landlady had given the TOBINS notice to quit; but she did not complain to the police, as she was in bodily fear of being assaulted by one or other of the prisoners. The evidence of the parish doctor was to the effect that little DANIEL, when he saw him, was almost dying from emaciation and neglect. He considered that the child's life was endangered, but since its transference to the infirmary it had very much improved in general health, although, from weakness, it still remained speechless. On the relieving-officer being recalled, he said that the other children were in a horribly neglected condition. Neither temporary want of employment nor chronic destitution had anything to do with the state of worse than savagery in which the TOBINS lived; for when the man was apprehended he drew his week's wages, amounting to one pound three shillings and sixpence. Surely he might have got drunk, as was his custom on Saturday afternoons, on a couple of shillings at the outside; to have become comfortably tipsy on the other six days of the week need not have cost more than half a dozen shillings; and allowing a possible three shillings for the "pocket money" of his wife and three shillings for the rent, nearly half a sovereign would have been left to purchase food for the children. Ten shillings is not much; but it will buy a good deal of bread and some milk, and a little scrap of meat now and then; and the TOBINS, had they observed even a modicum of the laws of thrift—as thrift is understood by such wretched feckless beings as they—might have tippled daily and gaily like Mynheer VAN DUNK, and still have had pence sufficient to feed their children. As for household cleanliness and the tending of the children, that was Mrs. TOBIN's business; but the female, it appears, found attractive occupation elsewhere than in her own dwelling, and gave up to social enjoyment out of doors that which was meant to keep her own home tidy or even tolerably decent.

The upshot of the Poplar case was a lamentably lame and halting one. Mr. SAUNDERS observed that the prisoners no doubt neglected their children, but he could not see his way to convict them, and JOHN TOBIN and ELIZABETH, his wife, were consequently discharged. It is not for us to question the validity of Mr. SAUNDERS's decision, or even to suggest that the magistrate might have done well had he given not the prisoners but the public the benefit of any doubt which existed in his mind by committing TOBIN and his wife for trial, so that at least a Judge would have had the opportunity of telling a jury what really constitutes the criminal and consequently punishable neglect by parents of their children. As it is, we have but to accept with what satisfaction we may Mr. SAUNDERS's judgment—which is virtually to the effect that a parent in good health and in permanent employment at good wages may leave his little child half-naked and half-starved without incurring any legal censure whatsoever. If the child DANIEL had been beaten black and blue by its father or mother, the brutal parent would probably have been sent to prison for a lengthened period for an aggravated assault, and the humane public would have rejoiced at the conviction. The most brutal parents, however, who belabour their children with such implements as pokers and tongs, the legs of chairs, and the buckle-ends of straps, do not habitually starve the objects of their wrath and the victims of their sottish habits. The children are fed even if they are beaten; but there is quite as much cruelty, quite as much barbarity, quite as much ferocity, in starving a child, or systematically ill-treating it, as in assaulting it with blows and stripes. We would not accuse the drunken painter of Poplar or his wife of a wish to kill the child DANIEL, but to withhold nourishment and clothes and medical help from the unfortunate infant, and to allow it to lie forlorn and speechless in a pestiferous den, inexpressibly filthy, was certainly to use the surest means of putting the babe to death by neglect and inanition. Worthy Mr. SAUNDERS declared that he did not see his way to punishing parents who had neglected their children as TOBIN and his wife were proved to have done. The magistrate, no doubt, knows the law which he is paid to administer, and we are bound to bow to his decision; but, while reluctantly accepting Mr. SAUNDERS's view of the TOBIN case as a strictly legal one, the public at large will agree with us, we should say, that, if there be no law to punish drunken wretches who allow their children to go half-starved and half-naked, and to harbour them in a filthy hole the stench of which is unbearable, the sooner that the law is altered and made to cope with such crapulous criminals the better it will be for English civilisation at large and London society in particular.

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Thursday Night.

The "Hunting Season" has opened to-day, and if the weather all over the country has been as fine as it is in Town, there will have been no cause for complaint, except in the districts ravaged by the floods. At no time, in spite of the Revolution and the New Régime, has the sport been more keenly pursued by the rural magnates. France can now boast of possessing upwards of 300 packs of hounds, from the eighty or a hundred kept by some Grand Seigneur down to the dozen or twenty active and sturdy animals with which the old-fashioned gentleman of Brittany or La Vendée sallies forth from his ancient Château to enjoy the "Pleasures of the Chase."

To-day the notorious swindler Allmayer was brought up for trial before the Assize-Court of the Seine. The proceedings attained the usual importance attached to Causes-célèbres, and the female element predominated in the Court, particularly during the morning sitting, both Mondaines and Demi-mondaines being anxious to catch a glimpse of the extraordinary adventurer whose career of crime was the talk of the hour. Later in the day public interest in the proceedings abated; but even at four o'clock this afternoon the Court was still filled with people, who listened with attention to the meticulous cross-examination to which the prisoner was subjected by the President of the Assizes. Allmayer was brought into Court at noon, escorted by several men of the Republican Guard and by policemen, for the fellow has already distinguished himself by his knack of escaping, like an eel, from his captors, and since his last arrest his gaolers have been doubled. He is an intelligent and even aristocratic-looking man of about thirty, just above the middle size, with black hair, thinning on the top of his head, and a thick black moustache. Allmayer stood as straight as a dart in his place at the banc des prévenus, and looked around unconcernedly on entering the court at his jurors and at the ladies, who were eyeing him through gold-rimmed or tortoise-shelled glasses. "A most distingué looking swindler," was a frequent expression muttered by fair lips as their owners gazed their fill at the felon and then sat down to hear the registrar read the formidable acte d'accusation. An analysis of this document will be sufficient. Allmayer was set forth as no common escroc who has adopted the career of "a swell-mobsman" through poverty, but as a man of good birth, excellent education, and brilliant prospects in business who became a swindler from choice. His father was a wealthy tradesman in Paris, who, instead of allowing his sons to grow up as dawdlers and drones among the "Golden-youth" of the period, made them work with him in his counting-house. This it was, perhaps, which made young Allmayer long for the life of a modern "freebooter," and resolving to have nothing more to do with ledgers and day-books he began swindling operations in the paternal office. His first exploit was to steal a "registered-letter" addressed to his father, and with the money thus obtained he absconded to Lyons. In that city he assumed the rôle of the individual who sent the letter, and wrote to his father in that person's name, representing himself as in broken health and almost destitute circumstances, and asking for postponement of payment. This M. Allmayer, "senior," agreed to readily, and by degrees forgot all about the matter until he heard through the police of the trick played by his promising son. Shortly afterwards Allmayer became a soldier, and stole the pay-chest of his captain. He deserted; was captured, and accused the captain of having embezzled the money, but was condemned to five years' hard labour. On coming out of prison he created a "sensation" in Paris by the famous telephone trick in 1886. He telephoned to M. Kahn, a banker, asking him if he would discount a bill drawn by Kastor Brothers on London. M. Kahn immediately named his conditions, as he believed that the person who telephoned was M. Kastor. Allmayer cut the telephone wire and sent off an accomplice named Plivard, an old soldier, and a friend of his, to get the money from Kahn. All went on well so far. Allmayer divided the spoil unequally with Plivard, and the bill was sent to the bankers in London, who discovered that it had been tampered with by Plivard—as was subsequently proved—and returned it to Kahn. Arrests were made all round among the persons implicated, besides Allmayer being two ill-fated clerks, and M. Edmond Kastor, who, according to M. Kahn, had telephoned to him about the bill. Before the Juge d'instruction Allmayer, who was a boon companion of Edmond Kastor's, impudently accused that gentleman of the fraudulent operation of which he had been guilty himself. "Confess, old boy," he said to the astounded Kastor, "you had got into debt at the Bougival Casino, and wanted 40,000 francs"—£1,600. On the strength of this accusation poor Kastor was imprisoned for nearly a fortnight at Mazas; the police pried into his private history and drew up a terrible document, in which he was accused of being a gambler, a carouser, and a coureur de filles. Later on Kastor was released; Plivard was condemned to five years' imprisonment and Allmayer to twenty years; but the swindler escaped twice from custody, once by tripping up his captor, and a second time by filling in a "release-warrant" while the back of the Juge d'instruction was turned. That was in September, 1886, and in October, 1887, Allmayer, in company with a lot of Italians, returned to Paris, and began work under the name of "Mayer." He represented himself in Paris as connected with M. Alfassa and M. Camondo, bankers, and as having a contract to supply the Sultan of Morocco with muskets. On the strength of this he obtained sums of money from dupes, and went off to spend it with amies in Havre, where he was arrested.

Allmayer had not obtained large sums of money by his swindling operations, but his case is peculiar as affording a remarkable example of criminal aplomb and audacity. He was sharp and swift in action, and although he was well-known to the police he was for a long time able to defy them. On the night of his memorable escape from Mazas after he had filled in a "release-warrant" and boldly sent it to the Governor of the prison, he put on a dress-coat and a white-tie and attended a première at the Comédie-Française. When imprisoned in the Cherche-midi he nearly escaped, like Monte-Cristo, in a sack, and was only captured owing to the interception of a letter. In Belgium, when on the point of being "extradited" he was liberated, and while the detectives were looking for him last Winter and during the Summer he was gambling at seaside Casinos in France with cocottes, and passing himself off now as the "Comte de Maupas," and at another time as the "Comte de Motteville." All this strange, eventful history was detailed to-day in Court both in the indictment and in the cross-examination of the accused, who replied to the Judge with his habitual coolness. Once or twice the prisoner scowled at the people in Court who were laughing at his barefaced denial of the truth. About twenty witnesses will be called in the case, which comprises three charges—the "Telephone business," the "Morocco swindle," and the "Forgery of a 'release-order.'" Allmayer will afterwards be tried by the ordinary police-tribunal for at least half-a-dozen minor misdemeanours which have been proved against him.

The reopening of the Nouveau-Cirque is invariably a brilliant night for the Rank and Fashion of Paris. The word "Rank" must here be read in its widest sense, for titles being no longer officially acknowledged in France, and the right of those who use them being generally called into question, "people of Rank" must here be taken to mean the "Upper-Ten." No "Clubman"—to use a locution which has come into thorough vogue here—who respects himself, and none of the ladies—who are not the less talked about because they are not respectable—would for the world miss the opening night at the Cirque in the Rue Saint-Honoré. Accordingly, the prettily-appointed house was crammed long before the chief attraction of the evening was produced. This consisted of a pantomime by M. Félicien Champsaur, who has made a speciality of this kind of entertainment, and brought out one at the amateur Cirque Molier last Spring. M. Champsaur recently published a volume of sketches, which he entitled "L'Amant des Danseuses." The pantomime is as essentially and characteristically "Parisian" as the book could well be, for it is full of the suggestiveness which is peculiar to what is here styled in "slang" parlance, "Fin de siècle" literature. The author has, so to speak, fallen in love with one of his own personages, "Lulu," whom he represents as an acrobatic danseuse at the "Nouveau-Cirque." What then more natural than that he should desire to see the creation of his brain appear very much in flesh and blood in the arena wherein he imagined her to have won her triumphs? "Lulu" is loved by a "marble heart," and this particularly hard and substantial article is found by an old pedant, whose green embroidered coat marks him out to be an Academician, although the playbill tells us that his name is "Schopenhauer." We may remember that the German philosopher was a member of the French Academy; but then, "Schopenhauer" has come to mean in France the personification of pedantic Pessimism. The philosopher tries to break the "heart of marble" in order to see what there is inside; but it is not such as he who can break a woman's heart can manage, so, after at first refusing to part with it, he at length is wheedled by the fascinating and flimsily-clad damsel into returning the article useless to him to its rightful owner. No sooner is it again in her possession than "Lulu" straightway and of her own accord makes a present of it to "Harlequin," whom she embraces tenderly, while "Schopenhauer" "holds the candle." This is an allusion which will be readily understood by the readers of De Musset's Proverbs; but the remark inevitably points to the inappropriateness of such a pantomime in such a place. M. Félicien Champsaur's work is indeed far too delicate to be well fitted for an arena in which we have just been gazing at female bicyclists in flesh-coloured tights; at acrobats doing daring trapèze performances; at a young lady, clad as a jockey, jumping from the ground on her bare-backed steed, and at the clever clown, who has trained his monkey to be equally clever. It is these same old-fashioned scenes in the Cirque which are always seen with new pleasure by the frequenters of Circuses; but there is also water at the Nouveau-Cirque, and it is utilised now in a novel fashion for the purposes of a mimic naval fight. The arena represents a tiny harbour, backed by a castle and town, and the strong forts are attacked by miniature vessels of war, the ironclads eventually sinking while the powder-magazine is blown up. If you say all this is very childish, the management will probably reply that it is meant for children, and that they will enjoy it.

On the Bourse to-day the last quotations were: Three per Cents., 82f 47½c (no change); Four and a Half per Cents., 105f 52½c (a fall of 5c); Italians, 97f 10c (a fall of 15c); Turks, 15f 45c (a rise of 15c); Spanish Exteriors, 73f 90c; Egyptian Unified, 426f 25c; ditto Preference, 521f 25c; and Ottoman Bank, 540f. Suez Canal shares closed at 2,228f 75c, and Rio Tinto at 600f. The activity of yesterday was not maintained to-day. French Three per Cents. were stationary, and there was a slight fall in Four and Half per Cents. There was a fall in Italians and Spanish Exteriors, but Egyptian Unified remained stationary. On the Petite Bourse to-night closing prices were: Turks, 15f 40c; Spanish Exteriors, 74f 87c; Egyptian Unified, 425f 31c; Ottoman Bank, 538f 75c; and Rio Tinto, 598f 12c.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

49 KILLED—22 INJURED.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.

A terrible accident occurred on the Lehigh Valley Railway, between eight and nine o'clock yesterday evening, midway between Whitehaven and Pennhaven Junction, near the little station known as Mud Run.

The train was occupied by a Catholic excursion party returning from the annual convention and parade of the Father Mathew's Temperance Society of the Diocese of Scranton, which had been held at Hazleton, and had been attended by an enormous concourse of people from the Luzerne and Lackawanna counties, to convey whom a number of special trains were despatched from Whitehaven to Pennhaven.

The first and second sections of the return train to Scranton started from Hazleton about five o'clock yesterday afternoon, the other portion following as rapidly as possible. The first three sections got through safely, but, from some unascertained cause, the fifth section, which was running at a good rate of speed, ran into the fourth, while it was at a standstill on the track near Mud Run, at which point the railway embankment, which is a steep and high one, and follows the course of the Mud River, is from sixty to seventy-five feet above the water.

The cars, which were crowded to the very doors, principally by women and children, were literally hurled off the metals by the force of the collision and thrown down the embankment into the river, where they were smashed to pieces. Fortunately, the water was low at the time, or the loss of life must have been much greater. All the physicians of Whitehaven and the surrounding district are now at the scene of the wreck rendering aid to the injured.

Passengers by the Central Railroad trains who have arrived at Wilkesbarre give terrible descriptions of the scene at Mud Run, the groans and cries of the injured being heard on the opposite bank of the river, along which the Central Railroad track runs.

The estimates of the number of persons killed vary considerably, some placing it at twenty-five and others as high as eighty.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (LATER).

The relief train conveying the injured and uninjured from Mud Run having arrived at Wilkesbarre, complete accounts have now been received of the extent of the railway accident. The total number of killed has now been ascertained to be forty-nine, and of injured twenty-two.

The accounts given by passengers serve more and more to show the appalling character of the disaster. It appears that it was the fourth section of the excursion train which ran into the third, and not the fifth into the fourth, as first reported. The third section was stopped by signal at Mud Run, in order to let the first two portions get ahead. While it was at a standstill the fourth section came up at a high rate of speed, the line apparently being signalled clear, and ran right into it with such force that the engine plunged through the full length of the rear car, driving the frames through the next one two-thirds of its length, and forcing this second car into the third.

From the rear car, which was crowded, not a single person escaped, while the occupants of the next, which was also full, were in one moment transformed from a merry group of holiday folk into a confused mass of maimed and bleeding bodies. Even from the third car but few survived. To add to the horror of the scene the engine, which was shattered by the shock of the collision, poured forth columns of scalding steam and streams of water from the broken boiler amid the groans of the injured who sat pinned by the wreckage alongside of the bodies of the victims still erect on their seats and staring with open glazing eyes.

As the steam and smoke cleared away a terrible sight was revealed, the crushed and broken timbers of the rear car being hung with mangled bodies and dissevered limbs, while the few bodies unmangled were burned and scalded.

A heart-rending incident occurred in an attempt to release a young lady passenger whose legs were held fast in the wreckage. One leg was quickly released, but the other was held so tightly that an axe was brought to chop away the débris, and a misdirected blow severed the limb from the body, causing the almost instantaneous death of the lady.

The few houses in the sparsely populated neighbourhood of Mud Run are filled with injured, many of whom are badly burned by the gas from the engine stack.

The arrival of the train conveying the survivors at Wilkesbarre, where a large crowd anxiously awaited it, caused many painful scenes to be witnessed, as among those at the station were a number of the friends and relatives of the victims.

The cause of the accident is variously attributed to negligence on the part of the signalman to show the danger flag to the fourth section as it approached, and to the train being unprovided with air brakes. The killed and injured are nearly all Irish.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (5.0 P.M.)

It is feared that the first report of the number of persons killed in the accident at Mud Run will after all prove not to have been exaggerated. Nine more bodies have been recognised, bringing the total up to fifty-eight, and a number still await identification. Two of the persons injured died this morning in the hospital at Wilkesbarre, and six more are beyond all hope of recovery.

THE CZAR OF RUSSIA.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

TIFLIS, Oct. 10.

The Czar and Czarina this afternoon received in formal audience the Special Envoy despatched by the Shah to greet the Emperor and Empress on their arrival here. The reception given to their Majesties by the inhabitants has been of a very brilliant character.

A guard of honour furnished by members of the Georgian nobility was drawn up at the entrance to the town, and a loyal address was delivered by the Marshal of Nobility.

The Czar, in reply, said he did not doubt that the heroic Georgian Nobility were animated by unswerving fidelity to Russia.

THE "BLACK-MOUNTAIN" WAR.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

SIMLA, Oct. 11.

Detachments from the first and second columns of General M'Queen's expedition have burnt four native villages, including Beerun, the inhabitants of which began the attack on the late Major Battye last June.

The fourth column is now engaged in improving the road, and has been reinforced by two companies of the Seaforth Highlanders.

Sir Henry James, M.P., is at present staying at Westacre High House, near Swaffham, Norfolk.

KAISER, KING, AND POPE.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

ROME, Oct. 8.

When I quitted this city in the early spring of 1870, one of the most memorable years of its "strange, eventful history," Rome was still the capital of the much-diminished Pontifical States. Over Hadrian's gigantic tower-tomb waved the white banner of the Cross-keys. French lignards, "myrmidons of the Third Empire," shared the duty of guarding his Holiness's person, and preserving Papal sovereign independence, with the men of all others to whom the Napoleonic régime was most repugnant—French gentlemen of high lineage, enthusiastic Legitimists and fervent Catholics, who, having refused their allegiance to an usurper in their native land, had vowed it to a foreign Monarch—the venerable Priest-King, Pius IX.—in whose cause they shed their blood no less lavishly than they did later on for France, in the hour of her extreme need. In the left arm of the gigantic cross constituting the ground-plan of St. Peter's Basilica, the Œcumenical Council "still was sitting, still was sitting," in solemn, long-protracted deliberation over a foregone conclusion. I forget how many archbishops, bishops, mitred abbots, archimandrites, and other dignitaries of the Roman Church, and of Oriental churches affiliated to her, were then sojourning in the Eternal City: but I am under the impression that their number was greater than that of the garrison of San Angelo, and certainly more ecclesiastics than soldiers were to be seen daily in the dirty, malodorous, indescribably picturesque streets of Pontifical Rome. Troops of mysterious personages, robed and hooded in all the more livid hues of a "low-toned" palette, glided about the Transteverine vicoli, doubtless on errands of mansuetude and benevolence, such as it was then the privilege of the Roman Confraternità to perform in the forbidding guise of inquisitorial bogies. The one railway station of Rome in those days was a sordid shed, inconvenient, unclean, and neglected in more than one important respect, as beseemed the symbol of a reluctant concession made by faith to science. After sunset it was not prudent to walk through the most fashionable and frequented thoroughfares of the city. One evening, at about seven of the clock, barely nineteen years ago, whilst the Infallibility Dogma was under consideration and Rome boasted the presence of a thousand prelates within her walls, two gentlemen, Romans by birth, with whom I was acquainted, were robbed in the Corso itself, at the corner of the Via delle Carrozze, of all the money and valuables they had about them. They came into a club of which I was an honorary member; both were in evening dress, but presented a curious spectacle of sumptuary dilapidation. Not only had their watches, chains, rings, and currency been taken, but their shirt-studs and solitaires, jewelled waistcoat-buttons, &c., had been dexterously abstracted whilst, under threat of death should they attract attention by outcry or gesture, they appeared to the numerous passers-by to be engaged in ordinary street-corner talk with their despoilers. During the winter of 1869 there was but little safety for well-to-do foreigners, or even natives, in broad daylight outside the gates of Rome, for the Campagna was infested by bandits of so uncompromising a sort—witness the murder of Mr. Sinimberghi within hail of the Porta Pia—that the Papal Government found it necessary to offer large money rewards for their capture, alive or dead, and to pay its squadriglieri, or special brigand-hunters, a handsome sum for every brigand's head brought into Rome and delivered to the chief of the police. Such were some of the more salient aspects and characteristics of this city when I bade it farewell in April, 1870. A few months later it passed into the hands of the Italian authorities, and became the capital of the Regno Unito—of Free Italy. Since it underwent this transformation I had never, until a day or two ago, been privileged to revisit a city which, despite all its dangers and shortcomings, had exercised a strange fascination upon me throughout my long sojourn within its tawny, rugged walls. That great changes in the way of pulling down and building up had been effected in the meanwhile, I was aware. Still, I must confess that I was by no means prepared for the tremendous innovations and so-called improvements that have astounded and bewildered me on every hand since my arrival hither, as I have walked or driven through Roman districts formerly familiar to my eye, now so thoroughly transmogrified as to challenge, nay defy, my powers of recognition.

It has been said that life, by reason of its necessary monotonies of habits, pursuits, and surroundings, would be unendurable but for the element of surprise. I can well believe that it might be so to persons of exceptionally quick intelligence and keen sensibility. Unfortunately few surprises are altogether agreeable; in ten cases out of twelve their effect upon the person surprised is a more or less unpleasant one—at least, that is my experience of them. Rome, at the present moment, positively teems with surprises for one who knew, loved, and reverenced her a score of years ago, and is now suddenly brought face to face with her as she courts admiration in the right of her new developments and adornments. But the majority of her surprises are more startling than satisfactory. When they assume the architectural form, for instance, they are—so far as I have hitherto been enabled to take cognisance of them—distinctly out of keeping with any one of the great and impressive cities, each built upon the ruins of its immediate predecessor, which made up the Rome so graphically described by Byron—Rome of the Cæsars, the Barons, the Popes, alternately maltreated and embellished by its successive possessors, and bearing a romantic cachet of its own, invested with a nameless, indefinable charm, that is rapidly being dispelled by the "improvers" of the "free and united" régime. These disciples of progress and reform seem to have had matters pretty well their own way on the Seven Hills and in their appurtenant valleys during the past eighteen years, and to have set themselves the task of raising up a new Rome which shall have nothing in common with Imperial, Baronial, or Papal Rome, once the chef-lieu of an empire as extensive as our own, and subsequently the capital of all Christendom, but shall be typical of modern Italy—that is to say, prosaic, matter-of-fact, somewhat showy, and not a little vulgar. The Rome that has partly sprung up and is being rapidly proceeded with under this particular creative scheme is manifestly intended to be "Italianissimo"—the most Italian city of Italy, as she is, one and indivisible; democratically constitutional or constitutionally democratical, according to the terminological fancy of whatever political coalition happens to be in office; a country ruled in great measure by revolutionary rhetoricians, the survivors of a period of splendid and successful agitation, who care nothing for Rome's past glories, and would gladly efface them, were such a feat possible, from the memory of her actual citizens. I do not mean to infer that the men of the "new order of things" have proved iconoclastic to the extent of sweeping away, or even mischievously meddling with, the monumental antiquities and earlier historical relics of this venerable city. They have, it is true, cleaned up the Coliseum in a way that can scarcely fail to make the judicious grieve. Flavian's grand amphitheatre has been denuded of its verdant mantle. All the picturesque growths with which Nature had concealed its mutilations and disguised its decay have been torn down and rooted up, leaving its every injury and blemish displayed in hard, ragged outline. All the mystery, too, that formerly enveloped the wonderful ruins of the Foro Romano, suggesting a thousand interesting suppositions and conjectures to lovers alike of the classical and the picturesque, is now dispelled by "judicious excavation and arrangement," and the disjecta membra of that once mighty construction are all, so to speak, dusted, classified, and laid out with oppressive neatness. These, and many other remains of Imperial Rome, including the Palace of the Cæsars on Mount Palatine, bear the appearance of having been brushed up and renovated, as though New Italy could not quite bear with them for looking so old. There is much offence, though no actual destruction, in all this; but there is far more, as well as a distressing amount of wreck and ruin, in the ruthlessness with which municipal innovators and speculative builders have dealt, and are dealing, with at least half the streets of Rome on either side of the Tiber. Even the Corso itself has not obtained immunity at the hands of these enterprising persons. Between San Carlo and the Palazzo di Venezia ghastly gaps, huge hoardings, and grey piles of débris are to be seen on either hand, and at brief intervals, where massive old buildings used to stand in reposeful continuity. The Ripresa de' Barberi is fast succumbing to the irrepressible pick and shovel. It is the same in side streets of all shapes and sizes, saunter which way you will eastward or westward of Rome's main artery. Along either bank of the Tiber utter ruin alternates with unfinished construction. The great Apollo Theatre is down, its site occupied by a few mounds of rubble. Accumulations of architectural wreckage have blocked the Via di Tordinone, so that to reach the Ponte di San Angelo from the Via Brianzo a wide détour of half-a-dozen curly narrow streets has to be made; and so on, ad infinitum atque nauseam.

It is, however, rather for what they have built up than for what they have pulled down that the "improvers" of Royal Rome deserve unqualified reproach. Their new constructions, whether public buildings or private dwelling-houses, are almost without exception commonplace, pretentious, and void alike of dignity and distinction. Streets upon streets, consisting exclusively of edifices of this class, have been run up in the district, the boundaries of which are roughly indicated by the Quirinal, the Termini, the Pretorian Camp, and the Porta Pia. Within these limits stand the new railway station and Ministry of Finance, enormous buildings with nothing impressive about them but their vastness; and countless barrack-like piles of flats line the new roadways that have been made rectangularly, after the Turin manner, to the right and left of the Via del Venti Settembre, a wide new street connecting the Piazza Monte Cavallo with the Porta Pia, and throughout the once green garden region intervening between the Villa Borghese and the Villa Ludovisi. It is of these huge lodging-houses that new Rome will chiefly consist a few years hence, when the "improvements" now in course of effectuation shall be fully carried out. They stare you out of countenance down by the Tiber, all over the Ghetto district; the Ghetto itself being a thing of the past, whose former place knows it no more. They completely cover the broad, deep district of the Prati del Castello in the rear of the Vatican and of Hadrian's fortress. In short, they are ubiquitous within and without the enceinte of Aurelian—lofty, square, formal, staring, Modern-Italian in the most objectionable sense of the word.

Not much visible open-air preparation for the reception of William II.—I may mention that the street-decorations, illuminations, and fireworks with which his Majesty will be complimented during his stay here are characteristically described in the local press as "Homages to the German Emperor"—is being carried out as yet, and Rome is uncommonly empty, considering the importance attached by Italians in general to the Kaiser's approaching visit. Flagstaffs have been erected on either side of "Twentieth of September-street," Rome's latest Via Triumphalis, and a considerable amount of additional electric force has been laid on at and round the Quirinal, with a view to turning night into day near the palace which is soon to house an Emperor as well as a King. Yesterday was a day of arrivals. The Duchess of Edinburgh, at three p.m.; her Royal and Imperial Highness was received at the station by the British Chargé d'Affaires, Mr. Kennedy. Count de Launay, Italian Ambassador in Berlin, at a little after midday. At an earlier hour a strong draft of State carriages and horses from the Breite Strasse in Berlin, where are situate the Imperial stables appurtenant to the Altes Schloss and the Palace "Under the Linden." The young Emperor has satisfactorily solved the difficulty raised by the Vatican with respect to the manner of his transport thither from the Quirinal, by ordering down his very own Imperial equipage de gala all the way from his own Northern Reichs-Stadt to the Italian capital, instead of adopting the ingenious compromise, which proposed to carry him from the threshold of Humbert II. to that of Leo XIII. in one of the carriages belonging to Count Solms. As his Hohenzollern Majesty has arranged matters, his foot will not once touch Italian soil during that brief but significant traject, throughout which it will rest upon a piece of genuine German manufacture, convertible for all the objects aimed at by the Vatican, with the aid of a very little permissible figurativeness, into "Ein echtes Stuck des edlen deutschen Vaterlandes."

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Oct. 11.

According to yesterday's bulletin from Görgeny, a couple of bears were seen and heard, but not shot, by the two Princes and their party.

Intelligence was received on Tuesday evening that bear tracks had been discovered at a place called Höber. The local game-book was consulted; the oldest inhabitants were asked for their opinion, and at an early hour a distinguished company set out—this time full of faith in their improved prospects of sport. They had a long way to go. A shaky drive of two hours brought them to the village of Fancsal, and here horses were in waiting for them. They rode through the woods to the crest of the Sirod Mountains. After they had taken their stands over one hundred beaters were sent through the cover. Two splendid bears were seen, but instead of escaping to the front they aggravatingly took a side "exit," and were heard of no more. There was plenty of other game, but it was not interfered with.

I remember being out wild-boar shooting five years ago. We did not see many boars, but eighteen large stags broke cover, only they were out of season, and we could not shoot them. Now in Transylvania there is a particular species of the bear-tribe which may be classified as the "political bear." It is well known that bears are by no means rare in the primeval forests of that most blest of Principalities. An English lady, the veracity of whose statements there is no reason to doubt, writing from the wilds of Transylvania to a friend last Winter, says:

> The Château is an owl-infested, rat-overrun barn in the midst of forests open on one side alone to a wide stretch of plain. Last Winter we shot wolves from the drawing-room window as a general rule, and on more than one occasion in the Autumn we watched a family of bears prowling about under the trees. The latter are quite harmless, and never attack even children unless driven to despair by pangs of hunger.

Of course on the present occasion the indifferent sport was due to the hot weather. The peasantry throughout the district where the Princes have been shooting is devoted heart and soul to the Imperial family, and it is doubtful whether they even knew that there were two or three Magyar grandees in the party.

Yesterday a petition was handed to the Prince of Wales by a once prosperous Hungarian builder now in reduced circumstances, begging for support in furthering a claim against an English firm of contractors who were connected with the building of the East-Hungaria Railway.

The Prince, who arrives here to-morrow evening, will probably go on Monday with Crown Prince Rudolph to shoot chamois in Styria.

NEWS FROM VIENNA.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Oct. 11.

King Milan of Servia is expected here to-morrow, and will remain a few days.

Prince Nikita of Montenegro has forbidden the Albanian mountaineers to pasture their flocks and herds on Montenegrin territory, unless they do so unarmed. Albanian colonists are likewise forbidden to have weapons and ammunition in their houses. To unarm an Albanian when surrounded by Montenegrins armed to the teeth will serve to increase the bitter animosities which have for centuries severed these mountain clans, and help to line the cradle of "the Future War."

At a General Convention of the Protestant Church of Hungary, held yesterday at Buda-Pest, Superintendent Sontagh brought an accusation against Superintendent Mudrony, reproaching him with having taken part in the Kieff festivities, and appealed to the Synod to punish the offender in accordance with Canonical Law. Herr Mudrony did not deny the charge, but questioned the power of the Convention to call him to account. The Kieff festivities, he affirmed, were of great religious importance, seeing that the Russians, by embracing Christianity, had brought it to Europe.

Herr Mudrony added: "If Kieff were in France or England, people would not make such a fuss about it. I own my Slav nationality—I am a Slav! It is no crime if I sympathise with an allied nationality."

One of Herr Mudrony's supporters then declared that the Lutheran Slavs would separate themselves from the Hungarian Protestant Convention in the event of the latter being influenced by Magyar "Chauvinism." This threat gave rise to a stormy discussion.

A correspondent at Nice telegraphed last night: "M. Floquet's Decree for the registration of foreigners came into execution at Nice to-day. The mayor desires specially to inform English visitors to the Riviera that the regulations will not affect them in the least even if they spend the whole Season here."

MADAME PATTI AT SWANSEA.—Madame Patti, with Signor Nicolini, Signor Tito Mattei, Herr and Miss Georgina [illegible], and other artistes, visited Swansea yesterday, on the occasion of a fourth concert in aid of Swansea Hospital and the poor people of the district of Craig-y-Nos. The audience included the Duchess of Teck, Princess Victoria of Teck, the Earl and Countess of Dunraven. The proceeds amounted to about £1,000. Several presentations were made to Madame Patti on the platform, the French Consul, on behalf of the President of the Republic, decorating her with the Order of Officier de l'Académie des Beaux Arts, in recognition of her assistance to the French Hospital in London.

SERIOUS CARRIAGE ACCIDENT.—Lady James, widow of the late Lord Justice James, had a narrow escape at Bristol yesterday. The horse which her coachman was driving bolted, and running over a man named Charles Davies killed him on the spot. The coachman and footman were thrown into the road. Lady James remained in the carriage till the animal impaled itself on some railings. Her Ladyship was uninjured.

GERMAN EMPEROR'S TOUR.

GRAND RECEPTION IN ROME.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

BERLIN, Oct. 11.

The Kaiser's reception in Rome and the Address of the Mayor of the Eternal City have made a most excellent impression in this capital. As to the political side of these visits, it is interesting to note that the Journal de St. Petersbourg—evidently inspired—rejects the idea that the Kaiser has any other end in view but to emphasise his good relations to the Courts of Vienna and Rome, and to register the fact of the pacific intentions of his policy.

"Hence," says the semi-official journal, "no negotiations on special points were contemplated. During his residence at Peterhof Kaiser Wilhelm assured himself of the pacific intentions of the Russian Czar, and he will undoubtedly have impressed the same upon the Court of Vienna. This, if he deem it necessary, he will do in Rome also. In any case it would not be done in obedience to any kind of obligation."

To this the North German Gazette, citing the opinion of the Berlin Foreign-Office adds:

"The St. Petersburg paper has, we have reason for supposing, correctly defined the political conversations which have taken place. Negotiations about Bulgaria were never contemplated by any party, and have not been mooted; consequently no arrangements have been concluded about this country."

I may add to this that I have been informed by a most trustworthy authority in this country that the aspect of foreign affairs is at this moment extremely favourable, and that the prospect for a long peaceful future is very bright.

A financial authority remarked to me this evening that this is exactly what the Finance-world foresaw from the course events have taken since Kaiser Wilhelm's accession to the throne.

Prince Henry of Prussia is shortly expected to go to Vienna to thank the Emperor Francis Joseph for his appointment as corvette-captain, but Kaiser Wilhelm will not return there.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

ROME, Oct. 11 (10.0 A.M.)

The newspapers, with the exception of the clerical organs, to-day publish articles unanimously rejoicing at the Emperor William's visit, and laying stress upon its political significance. The streets are gaily decorated, and Italian and German flags are floating from the windows of the houses.

A proclamation issued to the inhabitants by the Syndic says:

> "William II., Emperor and King, will reach Rome in a few hours. The strong and deep impression which you felt on the first news of his visit is a guarantee that the supreme head of the German people will be received in a manner worthy of so august a guest and of the grandeur of Rome. The high political significance of the visit has been grasped by the whole of Italy, and especially by Rome, which during twenty centuries saw the history of the world unroll itself around her, and which for the last eighteen years has been the sacred and impregnable citadel of Italian unity and of universal freedom of thought. The Monarch who will be received by you is the grandson of the venerated founder of German unity and the son of that magnanimous sovereign who gave such strong proof of his friendship for Italy and her dynasty; a Prince, wise and valiant, who in the space of a few months has given Europe a sure guarantee of peace, and has inspired his people, who equally with ourselves have experienced the reverses of fortune, with the confidence that his firm hand will lead them on to the high destiny in the future reserved for nations of valour and probity."

ROME, Oct. 11.

After long and difficult negotiations the ceremonial of the Emperor William's intended visit to the Vatican has been finally arranged. The Vatican in the first instance objected to the Emperor before receiving the Italian State dignitaries should visit the Pope, and urgent representations were made on the subject to Dr. von Schlözer, but in view of the impossibility of the wishes of the Holy See in this respect being complied with, the idea was ultimately abandoned. According to present arrangements, therefore, the Emperor will go to-morrow to the Palazzo Capranica, the residence of the Prussian Minister to the Vatican, in one of the Royal carriages.

After lunching with Dr. von Schlözer, who, besides the members of the suite, has invited Cardinal Rampolla, Pontifical Secretary of State, Cardinal Hohenlohe, and Mgrs. Mocenni and Agliardi to meet his Imperial guest, the Emperor will drive to the Vatican in a carriage sent specially from Berlin for the purpose. This equipage will be drawn by four German horses, and the attendants, coachmen, and grooms will wear the German Imperial livery.

On arrival at the Vatican, the Emperor will be received with great pomp, according to the ceremonial usages of the Pontifical Court. His Majesty and the Pope will have a private interview in the Sala della Scala, which ordinarily serves as his Holiness's private apartment, and will afterwards present to each other the members of their respective suites.

After being conducted over the Vatican Galleries, the Emperor will visit the Pontifical Secretary of State in his private apartment, and, having taken leave of the Pope, will return to the Prussian Legation, whence his Majesty will drive back to the Quirinal in the Italian State carriage.

At ten minutes past four this afternoon the Emperor William arrived here, the approach of the train conveying the Imperial visitor being heralded by salvos of artillery, and military music from the band of the 5th Infantry Regiment, a company of which, with a standard-bearer, acted as guard of honour in the railway station.

As the train drew up at the platform King Humbert, who was in full uniform, and wore several German orders, advanced to meet the Emperor, who wore the uniform of the Red Hussars and the collar of the Italian Order of the Annunziata. Both Monarchs embraced several times, greeting each other most cordially. King Humbert then presented to the Emperor the Crown Prince of Italy, the Dukes of Aosta and Genoa, Signor Crispi, General Pallavicini di Priola, the commander of the Ninth (Rome) Army Corps, the Prefect of the Province of Rome, the Syndic, and the high Court dignitaries in attendance.

The Imperial visitor, after in his turn presenting the members of his suite to the King, inspected the guard of honour drawn up in the station.

The appearance of the Emperor and his Royal host outside the station was the signal for a burst of tumultuous cheering from the immense crowd gathered on the Piazza di Termini. At the same moment the troops saluted, and the massed bands played the German national anthem. Besides the regular troops, all the military clubs and the popular associations were present with their bands and colours.

The two Monarchs then took their seats in an open State carriage, drawn by six horses, and the Royal cortège started from the station at half-past four. The first carriage, conveying the Emperor and the King, was escorted by General Count d'Oncieu de la Batie, commander of the Rome Military Division, at the head of a detachment of cuirassiers. Following the Royal carriage came ten other State equipages, the first two conveying the Prince of Naples and Prince Henry of Prussia, the Dukes of Aosta and Genoa, and the remaining eight the high Court dignitaries. Signor Crispi, Count Herbert Bismarck, Count Solms, and General Liebenau occupied one [illegible].

The cortège was greeted with one continuous salvo of cheers from an immense crowd all the way from the railway station to the Quirinal. The streets along the entire route, especially the Via Nazionale, were thronged, and the troops had some difficulty in keeping a passage for the Royal carriages.

On his arrival at the Palace, the Emperor was received by Count Gianotti, Grand Master of the Ceremonies, who conducted his Majesty to the Reception Saloon, where Queen Margherita was awaiting the Emperor, surrounded by the ladies of the Court.

After cordially greeting the Queen, his Majesty received the high Court dignitaries, the Ministers, the Knights of the Order of Annunziata, and the Presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, and addressed to each of them a few gracious words, conversing, however, at greater length with General Bertolè Viale and Admiral Brin, the Ministers of War and Marine respectively. Meanwhile, the Piazza outside the Quirinal had become crammed with people, who had followed the Royal cortège from the railway, and it was estimated that the crowd numbered at least 50,000 persons.

When the presentations were over the Emperor gave his arm to Queen Margherita and, followed by King Humbert and the other Royal personages, [illegible] the central balcony of the Palace. The King stood on the Emperor's right, the Princes being on the right and left of the Royal party. On the appearance of the Emperor the crowd broke into loud cheers and continued to wave countless small flags bearing the German and Italian colours, as well as pocket-handkerchiefs and hats, this loyal demonstration continuing for some minutes.

The Royal party then retired from the balcony, but the cheering was so persistent that the Emperor had to appear there himself twice more, together with the King and Queen and the Princes. The reception was, in fact, most enthusiastic, and was shared in by all classes of the population.

Throughout his journey to the capital the Emperor received a most cordial welcome, and, in spite of his Majesty's expressed desire that no demonstration should be made, crowds were present at all the stations between Pistoia and Rome, and raised cries of "Long live Germany and Italy" as the Imperial train passed.

At six o'clock the Emperor left the Palace, attended by an aide-de-camp, and paid visits to the Duke and Duchess of Aosta and the Duke and Duchess of Genoa. This evening a grand family banquet was given at the Quirinal in honour of the Emperor. His Majesty has several times expressed his thanks to King Humbert for his cordial reception; by which, he declared, he was greatly touched.

During the passage of the Royal cortège from the railway to the Palace Signor Crispi was frequently applauded by the people. The Premier turned to Count Herbert Bismarck and said: "These marks of approval are intended rather for you than for me, and signify that the alliance with Germany is very popular in Italy."

It is stated that on the occasion of the Emperor's visit to the Vatican to-morrow a popular Liberal demonstration will be made in his Majesty's honour in the Via della Città and the Via Leonina.

GOD'S GLORIOUS CREATION; or, The Wonders of Land, Sea, and Sky. Translated from the German of Dr. Kraman, J. Klein, and Dr. Thomé, by J. Minshull. Beautifully Illustrated with original high-class Engravings.
It is an old saw that "good wine needs no bush," and the publishers feel, in announcing a new and cheap issue of "God's Glorious Creation," giving an account of the wonders of the earth, sea and sky, and the animal and vegetable kingdoms, that it is scarcely necessary to commend the work to a large section of the public. Suffice it to say that whatever quarter of the globe the reader may seek information about, as to its surface, its seas, its rivers, its animals, its plants, its climate, he will find it in this work.
Specimen copy post free 7d.

"Como Silk Coverlets.—Messrs. Debenham and Freebody have introduced a novelty in Italian silks that has every claim to popularity by reason of beauty of colouring and genuineness of material. This novelty is hand-woven by peasants on the shores of the Lake of Como, and not only can they be used for coverlets, but they would prove most effective for portieres and curtains, lending themselves specially to decorative purposes generally. They are inexpensive, warm, light, and do not crease, being woven with unadulterated silk."—The Queen.
